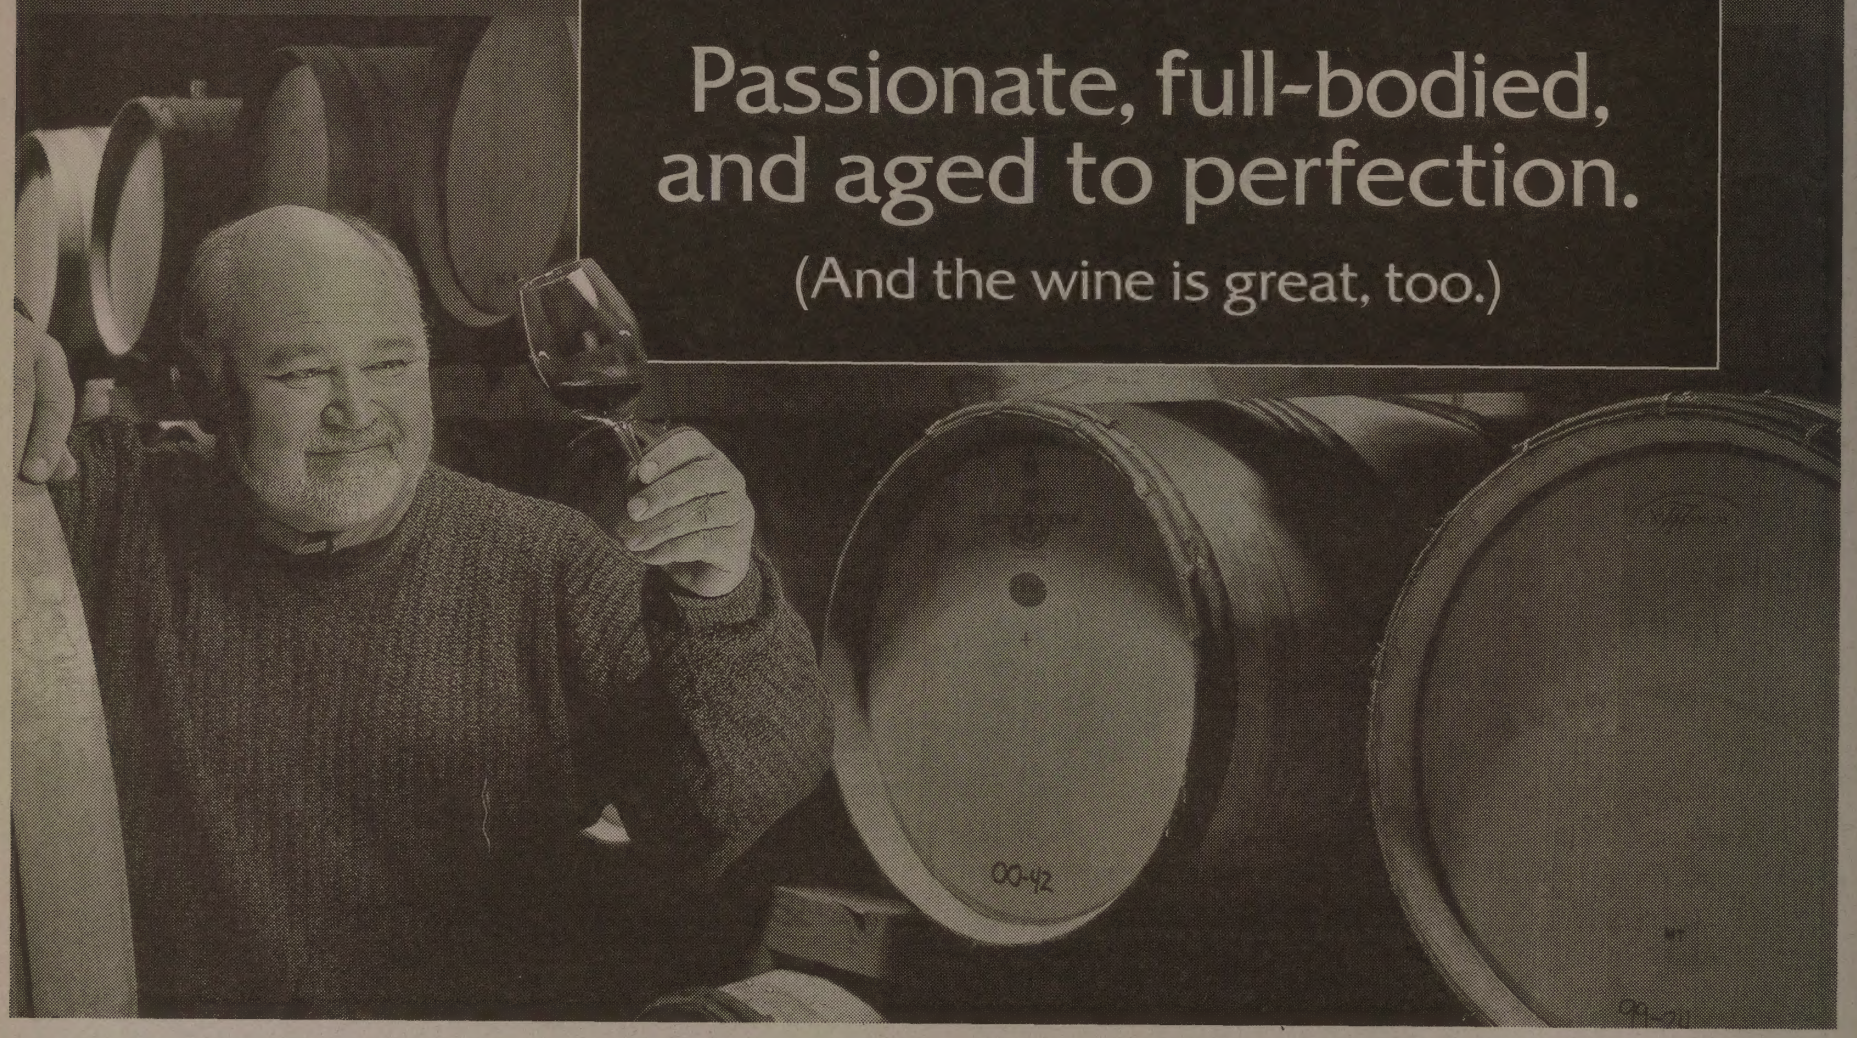
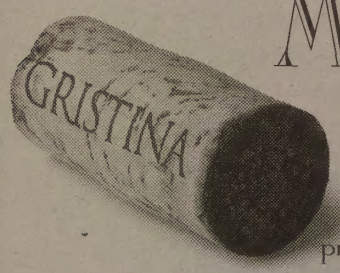
Galluccio Estate Vineyards

Passionate, full-bodied, and aged to perfection.

(And the wine is great, too.)





Meet Vincent Galluccio.

Just as a Stradivarius needs a gifted musician to make it truly sing, so too does a fine wine require a passionate presence to nudge its quality from merely excellent to exceptional.

At Galluccio Estate Vineyards, Vince is creating a special environment. One that has paid homage to the 16 year legacy of the award-winning Gristina vineyard while ushering in a new era of unprecedented vitality and sophistication to the Long Island North Fork wine growing region.

So, we hope the next time you're looking for something with a tantalizingly robust body and an excellent nose, you'll think of our Vince...so to speak.

MARCH SALE

Bought your pillows & comforters elsewhere? Guaranteed you overpaid!!!

CAVEAT EMPTOR (BUYER BEWARE)

Don't be misled by advertisements for European goose down comforters at supposedly "SALE PRICES". We'll show you that most of those ads do not represent good values at all. Just because these advertisements are from major departments stores - do not be fooled-all down is not alike.

The quality of goose down is measured in fill power (also know as loft). Fill Power is the amount of cubic inches one ounce of down will fill. Our 800 plus Siberian Goose Down will fill between 800 and 850 cubic inches of space. "The Company Store" catalog always lists the fill power of their goose down. Bring in their catalog and we'll generally save you 50% off their prices.

Goose Down Comforters are an investment, with proper care a fine quality comforter will last a life time. Our high quality 100% cotton shells, or tickings, are divided into baffle boxes. The baffle box has a mesh channel separating the top from the bottom of the comforter. The baffle allows the down to give you maximum loft without collecting in one section of the comforter. We do not cater to the consumer that is more interested in price than quality. Our most valuable asset is our customer. We will only sell a product that we believe to be the highest value at the best price. Cheap low quality down should fill garage cans not pillows and comforters. All our goose down pillows and comforters contain 100% goose down even though it is legal to combine 70% down and 30% feathers and label the item 100% goose down. Remember feathers are those things with quills, down is similar to tiny balls of cotton, absolutely no hard quill. Our goose down comforters and pillows are machine washable because they only contain down.

The larger the individual down cluster the higher the fill power. The higher the fill power the better the comforter will insulate thus providing more comfort to you. Since you are spending 1/3 of your life in bed it should be as luxurious as possible. - Why not?

Pole Confusion

LIPA Threatens To Sue KeySpan. Let's Take Down The Telephone Poles

By Dan Rattiner

It's no secret that one of the stated goals of this newspaper is to get all the telephone poles in the Hamptons underground. The old argument that it is too expensive to do this no longer holds up. In fact, the telephone poles themselves hardly hold up, so burdened are they with telephone, electricity, internet, cable and every other kind of wire. The foliage along our roadsides is butchered by maintenance men twice a year so that falling branches don't knock everything out. The wires are a danger to life and limb. And though the Hamptons are arguably about the most beautiful spot on the planet, the poles and wires are a blight on the landscape, more and more so as more and more wires go up.

The pole still stood, still supported this maze of wires, but was now in a weakened state.

Put the wires under the ground. The costs can be borne by the wide variety of firms now using them. And the huge maintenance costs of keeping the wires intact – all those trucks, equipment and man hours – can be saved as well.

That all of this makes perfect sense is beyond dispute. That any of this is going to happen sometime soon is doubtful because those in charge have allowed a free for all regarding telephone poles and wires to develop thus creating, to use an appropriate image, a huge tangle.

For example, earlier this year, Richard Kessel, who is chairman of our power authority, LIPA, went through the roof when he learned that a firm called KeySpan has put up more than 400 miles of wires on the telephone poles without getting permission from the power authority. They are supposed to have signed a leasing agreement to pay a rental fee to LIPA to do this, he said. And since he, Kessel, had put a temporary halt to all leasing agreements while he and his aides work out the details to do this, he would probably have to file a lawsuit to put a stop to this illegal KeySpan activity.

I might note that the information that KeySpan was putting wires up on poles all over Long Island did not come to the attention of Mr. Kessel because his own installers told him about it, it did not come to his attention because KeySpan is heavily advertising the high speed telecommunications the wires make possible and has already made available – dozens of companies are already using the service – it did not come to his attention because the revenue for the service is already in the KeySpan annual report to stockholders, and it did not come to his attention because LIPA and KeySpan, having both been created at the same time when LILCO was broken up five years ago, often share the same offices (both signs are on the LILCO building in Bridgehampton). It came to his attention because the two principals of a new telecommunications firm that LIPA was refusing to lease pole space to told him about it.

The two men, Mike Power and Thom Heller, own Optimum Communications (not to be confused with another Long Island cable firm called Optimum Cable, a division of Cablevision). If they can't get pole access, they go out of business.

But it gets worse. Kessel may not know it, but as many as half of the telephone poles on Long Island are owned and operated by the telephone company – that's why they call them telephone poles – and bear a mark on them from either AT&T or New York Telephone or NYNEX or Bell Atlantic or Verizon – depending upon which point in time they were put up.

I found out about this four years ago when I did an article – some readers may remember it – about what happened when a car hit a telephone

South O' the Highway (and North, too)

You think the Rennert House was bad for Sagaponack? Beginning this summer, look for a 100 acre parcel of land to be subdivided into thirty two houses by thirty two modern architects, a show case of a development overseen by legendary architect Richard Meier. Among those already at the drafting board are Michael Graves, Peter Eisenman and Steven Holl. Prices will be between $700,000 and $2.2 million and that's no small potatoes.

Fashion designer Nicole Miller will be honored at the Second Annual Kite Dance at the Pierre on Tuesday. Beneficiary is the Child Development Center of the Hamptons Foundation for Special Children. Among the honorary co-chairs are NY State Majority Leader Joe Bruno and NYC mayor Rudolph Guiliani, who was last year's honoree.

Billy Joel, formerly of these parts, stepped out with his former girl friend, newswoman Trish Bergin, to attend a one-time stand up comedy show given by Jerry Seinfeld at a local Long Island club. Joel, a Long Island boy too, sold his East Hampton oceanfront house to Seinfeld two years ago for $32 million.

Donny Deutsch, the hard charging ad legend, is making changes in his life. He sold his agency to Interpublic for a reported $1.5 billion. He is marrying his longtime sweetheart Stacy Josloff at the Plaza. The house on the ocean in Amagansett? Hmmmm.

East Hampton's Steven Spielberg was in LA last week briefing Tom Cruise on his upcoming part in Spielberg's film Minority Report. He is currently winding up filming for Cameron Crowe's Vanilla Sky and will have only a few day's rest before Vanilla. Crowe saw Spielberg leaving the set and called to him, asking if he'd be an extra in Vanilla, to which Spielberg replied he would if Crowe would be an extra in Minority. Look for both in the other's. Where's Waldo?

Hamptonite Tina Brown is holding a VIP party and conference (with Paine Webber) for her Talk Magazine in Santa Barbara on the weekend of March 13-15. Lots of talk at the event should be about the Hamptons because among those attending will be Hamptonites Don Hewitt, Mort Zuckerman, Peter Jennings, Queen

Even though many of my patients and friends have undergone LASIX, all with excellent results, I was apprehensive. But Dr. Ricci and his staff were so professional and gentle I was reassured. The procedure was painless and I was able to resume normal activities the next day. I had a perfect result and recommend LASIK and Dr. Ricci without reservation..

pole in front of my house and split it vertically. I called this information in to the authorities. The pole still stood, still supported this maze of wires, but was now in a weakened state. It seemed to me to be a clear and present danger.

Four years later this pole is STILL THERE. The telephone company, who seemed to know the most about it, agreed it was weakened and had to be replaced. But there is no mark on this particular pole and so it was not clear if it was their pole or the lighting company's. One year after my phone call – we are talking 1997 – somebody, I do not know who, put a second pole in alongside the weakened pole. And then, in 1999, two years after that, new wires were put up on the new pole. The old wires, to this day, still remain on the old pole.

Question: How does Richard Kessel expect to lease space on the poles if half of them are owned by somebody else?

And this doesn't even address the fact that some of the poles sit on private land, some on village land, some on town, county, state or federal land. Yes we have a mess here.

By now, of course, you've realized that I have a personal interest in having all the telephone poles in our area removed because I am most concerned about the safety with the one, now two, poles in front of my house. Well, I've always been out front with my newspaper reporting. Beats having an axe to grind and not letting the reader know. But all this did get me thinking. And the more I think about it, the more I think all the wires ought to go underground and all damn poles taken down.

In the meantime, what I'm going to do is sit at a little chair and desk by the two poles in front of my house – sort of like at a kid's lemonade stand – and whenever anybody from a cable, telephone, TV, electric or internet firm comes by to do something with a wire on my pole, charge them a fee. Fifty cents for every burst of baud rate, bandwidth, cable channel, long distance service, internet highway on-ramp and megawatt they want to send through. •

Lillywhite's May Close. Nick Monte At Gurney's Announces Retirement

By Dan Rattiner

Two stories.

In 1962, Richard Nixon held a press conference in Los Angeles at which he said, very bitterly, that as a result of recent events, he would ride off into the sunset and therefore the members of the press "would not have Richard Nixon to kick around anymore."

At the time, he had just been beaten in a race to become Governor of California. Two years before, as Vice-President of the United States, he had run a race to become President and had lost to Jack Kennedy. He was very angry about what had happened.

Six months after this statement, I got a phone call from Nick Monte, who was the new owner of Gurney's Inn in Montauk. Nick was 46 years old at the time. I was 22.

Nick was 46 years old at the time. I was 22. "How would you like to interview Richard Nixon for your newspapers?" Nick asked me.

"How would you like to interview Richard Nixon for your newspaper?" Nick asked me. "He's staying at the Inn."

Just two years earlier, at the age of 20, I had founded Dan's Papers in Montauk. I was very full of myself. I thought, here's this has-been staying at the Inn. Nick wants to get publicity for Gurney's Inn. Well, that wouldn't be fair to my other advertisers, giving him extra publicity just because the old Vice President is staying there.

"No thanks," I said. And that's how I never got to meet Richard Nixon.

Here's the second story.

In the winter of 1984, Town Pond in East Hampton froze over and all the kids were out there skating around. I was 45 years old at this point, certainly not a kid, but I had kids, four of them, all under the age of 13, and I thought it would be a great idea if I could round up some ice skates and bring the skates and the kids and the wife back down to the pond to go skating that night.

Not a problem. And so, that night, we are standing around on rusty ice skates, pushing our way around the pond this way and that, when a hockey puck flies by and a kid of about 16 with a hockey stick comes whizzing after it.

Pretty soon, I see that in addition to all the people skating shakily around, there is this beat 'em up hockey game going on from one end of the pond to the other and these boys are racing around, going this way and that, whacking at the puck.

I got so excited watching this. I wanted to run off down the ice and join the game. In fact, I was so excited by the idea I tried to borrow a hockey stick from one of the players — just let me play for a minute I asked — no way, he said. I didn't play.

The next morning, first thing, I got in my car and drove to Lillywhite's Toy Store on Jobs Lane in Southampton. Harry, who'd run the store for as long as I could remember, waited on me.

"I want to buy a hockey stick," I said.

"I don't think I have one," he said. "Wait. I think there's one in the back of the basement. Follow me."

We walked into the back across the creaky wooden floor, down a flight of steps, and then through one basement to a second basement, and then through a door at the end of the second basement to a third basement. Deep in the back of that third basement, in semi-darkness, Harry rummaged through some boxes and emerged with a very dusty wooden hockey stick.

"Got it," he said.

I followed him back upstairs to the old cash register — the same one that is there today — and he handed the hockey stick to me. It was beautiful. It was made from many plies of wood glued together, the way they make old wooden tennis rackets. It must have been down there since the 1920s or 1930s. By the 1980s they didn't make anything like that anymore.

There was a price sticker on it. $3.99 it read. Harry looked at it. The sticker must have been put there when the hockey stick got put there.

"Well, if it says $3.99, that's what I have to sell it for," Harry said.

And he did.

Susan Lillywhite, Harry's daughter, took over the store after Harry died in 1996. Harry had completed 50 years there. And he'd taken it over from his father, also named Harry, who had taken it over from Harry's grandfather. The store had been founded in 1896.

Last year, there were rumors, never confirmed, that Lillywhite's would be sold to a toy store in East Hampton called Second Star on the Right. But it never happened.

Now there are rumors again, this time that this store may go out of business entirely. Rents are going through the roof on Jobs Lane. The Lillywhite family could make more money renting the store to one of the chic shops that are thriving along the Lane than they could working hard and selling toys. This summer might mark the end of one of the great Hampton traditions. Susan has apparently sent a letter about it to the employees.

In Montauk, meanwhile, it was officially announced last week that Nick Monte, who is now 84, will retire and leave the Inn in the capable hands of the younger members of the Monte family. The retirement date is scheduled for early September, 2001.

Nick Monte will thus conclude a 43 year run at the helm of Gurney's Inn. During that time, he has expanded the Inn from a series of beachfront cottages and a dining room — I think there was room for just 38 guests when he bought it from Maude Gurney in 1958 — to what is considered by many to be the premiere oceanfront spa, hotel and resort in the Northeast. Between the different dining rooms, cafes, indoor swimming pools and roman baths, hotel accommodations, beach cabanas, beauty salons, lounges, wedding reception rooms and conference facilities, there are, on any given day, perhaps six hundred people on the premises, if you count everyone on staff, the guests, visitors, spa goers and convention attendees. Nick Monte has been a man with extraordinary vision who made his vision come true. And my hat is off to him, and to his wife Lola, and to Paul, Angelo, Gladys, Theresa, Ingrid and all the rest.

One month ago, Nick called my office to invite me and Cathie to join him in meeting former President George Bush, who would be the guest of honor at a dinner given by the Long Island Association.

This time, I didn't turn him down. But I didn't accept either. I couldn't go because I was in Venice. I am 0 for 2.

There's an old story about the new ad salesman who goes out and sells Aunt Selma a $1,000 full page ad for her beauty salon because he doesn't know that all she spends every week is $50 for a 1/48th of a page.

When I was 28 years old, I expanded Dan's Papers from Montauk to East Hampton to Southampton and went in to sell Harry Lillywhite an ad, not knowing that he never in his life had taken one because he was the only toy store in town, everybody knew where he was, had been there himself by that time for twenty years and generations of parents had bought toys for their kids there since his grandfather founded the place before the turn of the century. From the nineteenth to the twentieth century, that is.

What did I know? I sold him an ad for $100.●

Recession Over

Let's Break Up Microsoft And Send The County Spiralling Into Recession. No?

By Dan Rattiner

This article is entitled Microsoft for Idiots.

Microsoft is a corporation that was founded by a handsome, blond, twenty year old surfer type named Bill Gates working in a garage with a friend in California. Everyone loved Bill Gates. And everyone was happy for this forward looking young man as he developed a product called "Windows" that helped to make computers popular around the world.

"Windows" is what they call in the computer industry a Platform. It is not necessary to know exactly what is meant by this, except to note that a Platform is something one builds things on top of, whether in the computer world or in the "real" world.

There were many Platforms in the old days. They had names such as DOS and UNIX and IBM2. But the "Windows" platform at a certain point in time was a bit better than any of the others, and people gravitated to it.

At this point it might be useful to make an analogy. Sometime in the 19th century, people developed different variations of baseball. But then there came along a man named Abner Doubleday and his version of the rules and the baseball field was, to make a pun, a big hit. People decided they wanted to play on the shape and size field that Abner developed. And so teams were formed, leagues were organized, stands were built and tickets sold and we have baseball, America's most successful game, all over the country.

Nobody objected to everyone liking Abner's baseball over the others. And nobody objected to everyone liking Gates' platform over the others.

But then, Gates made two mistakes.

The first one was, to continue the analogy, to only permit the bats, balls, uniforms and mitts that he would provide — charge a fee for the privilege — and by any means necessary ruin the businesses of anybody who tried to produce any competing bat and balls and mitts etc. He did this by the simple expedient of telling the owners of the teams that if they used any equipment for the ballfield made by anyone but him he would refuse to allow them to play the game. In other words, play ball with me, or don't play ball at all. By this means Gates drove out many manufacturers of software (to get back to the matter at hand) that were better made and better built

WILL SAG HARBOR SAY SHUT UP OR GO TO JAIL?

By Dan Rattiner

The Sag Harbor Village Board had a meeting scheduled on Tuesday night to consider a proposal that would make it a crime for Board members to tell anyone about what goes on in a closed door Village Board meeting. At the present time there is an ordinance which says Board members are not supposed to tell anyone what goes on in closed door meetings, but it is not a crime. And so there is no punishment. So now they want to make it a crime so if board members talk they could be sent to jail for fifteen days.

There has been too much leaking about what goes on in these meetings, say those who keep their mouths shut. The board members who are doing the leaking know who they are.

You may wonder why it should ever be considered wrong to talk about what goes on in a closed door meeting. Isn't there something called the Sunshine Law? Or the public's right to know what their officials are doing?

Well, yes. Those laws were passed about thirty years ago. After which it was soon found that there were some things that you really DID want to talk about behind closed doors. The State clearly defined them. For example, if a town is in the bidding to buy real estate, you don't want everybody to know what they will do next. Another compromising situation could involve a police investigation. That has to be behind closed doors too and that seemed fair enough. The State has all these exceptions spelled out.

On the other hand, the proposal in Sag Harbor just might not pass. There are a total of five board members. If three consider they might be the ones going to jail, well, there you are. Unless they were dumb.

Which reminds me of something going on in New York City, involving the City Council.

At the present time, the council is considering a proposal, which, if passed, would repeal term limits. Some years ago, the Council had put in term limits because certain Councilmen had been there forever, just elected over and over from their districts, and were collecting their $50,000 a year salary and simply not showing up for the meetings anymore. The plan to put in term limits was made, and on voting day it went through because, at least in part, the Councilmen who were not showing up, didn't.

Well, now one of them has roused himself and proposed that term limits be repealed. The vote on this plan is scheduled for next week, but analysts say the chance of it passing is about the same as finding a snowball in hell. Guess why.

Anyway, in Sag Harbor, the meeting about the gag law took place after our deadline. So it was either cancelled because of the storm, or it passed or it failed to pass. Wait 'til next week. • than the stuff that Gates insisted be used. Some of the companies that Gates sent to ruin included WordPerfect which made an excellent word processing program, DBase2, which made a fine database program, Netscape, which made a terrific way to get onto the Internet and several others.

The second thing that Bill Gates did wrong was to lose his boyish good looks. By the time he was 45, he looked like the overweight businessman he had become. The annual reports of his Microsoft company showed that, largely because of the monopoly he had developed, he was able to make nearly 30 cents on every dollar he charged. A huge markup. And this meant that, like Scrooge McDuck, he was putting together a fortune beyond any rational explanation. He had become piggy. By 1997, he was not only the richest man in the world, he was the richest man in the world richer than the next three combined. He also had a net worth larger than most foreign countries. How many meals a day could Bill Gates eat?

In this atmosphere, it is not surpising that, finally, the government began to respond to the pleas of the other enterprising young computer developers, who were, as mentioned above, going down for the third time. The government filed a charge against Microsoft accusing him of monopolistic charges against Netscape, one of his targets, and in a trial that should have been decided in about a day but took six months and made dozens of lawyers very rich, convicted him.

The penalty was not to put Bill Gates in jail, and it was not to require that Bill Gates' windows become public property, and it was not that Microsoft should be divided into dozens of parts and distributed amongst its victims and it was not that Microsoft should be forced to agree to abandon their evil practice and accept government supervision so as to not ever do this again to so many different well meaning people, the penalty was to divide Microsoft in two. The process of doing this breakup would begin at the sound of a gong and should be accomplished over the course of a year. On the other hand, Microsoft would have an opportunity to appeal the judge's decision, which they filed papers to do, and this process would take about a year and a half. No gong for now.

In the meantime, Microsoft went after still another "victim," called Palm Pilot. Palm Pilot is a small company that makes handheld devices with Platforms not made by Microsoft.

As for the plan to split Microsoft in two, it reminded many people of the legend of St. George and the Dragon, where St. George succeeds in crashing his big sword vertically down into the top of the dragon's head, thereby creating two dragons.

Many of the people who thought of this were people of means, whose investments fuel the American economy. And when they thought about this, and realized that this lousy decision might actually happen, or, worse, that it might be overturned but that this would not be known for at least another year, they decided maybe their money would be better off in a bank rather than out there invested in computer startups.

As a result, Bill Gates' fortune declined by half (he is STILL the richest man in the world), and the American economy coughed, sputtered and began to spiral down into a recession.

Since that time – which was last October and November – America has instituted three plans to halt this decline.

One. They elected a new President whose stated goal is to enhance the fortunes of Republican investors.

Two. They decided to allow an otherwise overly complicated merger between two media giants – America OnLine and TimeWarner – to proceed.

Three. Alan Greenspan, the economist who controls interest rates in this country announced an immediate and surprise reversal of course, making it easier and cheaper for everyone to get bank loans.

Where all this leaves us is unknown. But an interesting thing is developing which is that the game of baseball is being overtaken by a still more popular game called football. (In computer terms, it is called Wireless.) Anybody can play this new game, including Bill Gates. And there are new rules. And no monopolies. And it is a lot of fun.

This might just work out fine after all.

My suggestion? Slap Bill Gates on the wrist. Thank him for being so aggressive in leading the charge into baseball. And get his promise he won't do the same thing with football. Keep an eye on him. And let him know you are keeping an eye on him. •

St. Pats Parade

Follow The Leprechauns To Westhampton March 10 and Montauk March 25

By Janet Berg

Yesterday morning I woke up at the crack of dawn because I heard this rustling noise under my bed. So, with one arm holding me up, I swung my head down to the floor, picked up the dust ruffle and peaked underneath. To my surprise, I discovered this charismatic little rascal staring right back at me. He was only a few inches in height, with pointy ears and an orange beard.

"Top of the mornin' to ya," he said in his fairylike voice, dressed in gay, old-fashioned clothes of green, with a red cap, a leather apron and buckled shoes.

"Catch me if you can," he teased; but I put my head back down on my pillow. "I must be dreaming," I said, half asleep.

As I was dozing off again, I heard him still talking under there, telling me one story after another about all the St. Patrick's Day parades he's seen in his wee little life.

"Did you know," he went on, "that the first parade in America was in Boston in 1737? And the largest parade in the U.S. is in New York City? 'Tis wonderful, 'tis... on route, we stop at St. Patrick's Cathedral on Fifth Avenue and..."

His incessant talking was getting on my nerves, until he said...

"But me favorite parade of all 'tis the ones out on Eastern Long Island. THAT is where you'll find the POT 'O GOLD at the end of the rainbow. Just follow the parade down the green line, on Main Street in Westhampton Beach on Saturday, March 10 and there you will see the start of the rainbow that goes all the way to the very end of the earth – a long narrow peninsula called Montauk. This is where the rainbow ends during their St. Paddy's Parade on March 25.

"Neither rain nor shine nor (hee hee) blizzard will stop the Irish from the wearing of the green and marching in the grand parade.

"In Westhampton the march will start out on Mill Road to Main Street to the end of Sunset Avenue in front of the reviewing stand with dignitaries and news anchor John Roland."

"...me favorite parade of all 'tis the ones out on Eastern Long Island. THAT is where you'll find the POT 'O GOLD at the end of the rainbow."

"Wait a minute," I said impatiently, "back up. What were you saying about GOLD?"

"Well," he explained, "you may only keep the 'Pot 'o Gold' for yourself if you capture me during the long procession of marchers: the color guard, the 106th Rescue Wing and the U.S. Coast Guard, local school kids, the brownies and cub scouts, fire departments, Irish dancers, bagpipes, the Cycling Murrays, the Coneheads, the spectacular floats, and all the newcomers, yada, yada, yada.

"Rumor is, I am the 'man of the hour' and I shall LEAD them all."

"Oh, no," I stopped him. "I'm sorry to burst your bubble, but Architect Jay Sears has been chosen as the grand marshal of the Westhampton Parade."

"How could that be?" the little leprechaun protested. "He's the kindest man in the land, and everyone knows that 'nice guys finish last.'"

"Look, it's right here in the newspaper," I pointed out.

"Rats, he said. "My lucky charm must be malfunctioning. Even if I'm not in the lead in Westhampton, you still have to catch me to get the 'Pot 'o Gold.' So, 'Luck be with ye',' he snapped, before vanishing into thin air.

"Here I am, over here," he taunted. I turned around. "No, over here," he harassed.

"Stop that, you nasty little imp," I shouted.

"Oh, I'm only teasin' you, me lass. You know the saying, 'Everyone loves a parade,' especially the folks out east, just over the rainbow. Montauk is a long narrow peninsula, and the Montaukers are a fancy free bunch, they are, and they don't want to be bothered, especially the celebrities, like Paul Simon, Edward Albee, Dick Cavett, Robert DeNiro, yada, yada, yada.

"You little name-dropper." I accused.

"'Tis the truth, I tell ye. Did you know the first celebrity in Montauk was Teddy Roosevelt (and his Roughriders) in 1898 at the end of the Spanish American War? I got his autograph, I did."

"Teddy wanted my Pot 'o Gold, too, he did, but he could never catch me.

"So," he went on, "Here's the history: The Montauk Parade began without a bang on a clear and cold St Patrick's day in 1947 when a small hardy band set out of the first recorded Montauk Parade. They were Michael J. Egan, Jacques Hayden, Elisha Ammon and one Joseph Pugh. No reporters covered the event, but legend has it they set out from Second House Museum at the western end of Main street and walked to the then Montauk Tavern, now known as Shagwong. There was not another parade for almost 20 years.

In 1963 the parade consisted of one band and the only marchers were the firemen from the Montauk fire department, with perhaps 20-something onlookers at the most. But over the years, Montauk has one of the largest parades on all of Long Island. This year's parade promises to be the biggest in history, featuring 15 marching bands, 7 pipe and drum sections, 40 floats, and 14 fire departments, all cheered on by an estimated 15,000 Irish for a Day spectators.

"T'will be a lovely day. All the folks will be in jovial moods, after the long winter hibernation. They will be looking for the first signs of spring at the parade, the crocuses sprouting, the wafts of corned beef and cabbage in the air, the Pot 'o Gold and for the leader of the parade — ME".

"Oh, come on now, Danny Boy, you know they're not rolling out the green carpet just for you in the Montauk St. Patrick's Day Parade. The grand marshal is Owen Clancy . . . .

"Tis me, I tell ye - I am the leader. Look who is holding the traditional lucky whistle?" he announced, waving it front of me.

So, I grabbed the grand marshal whistle and I blew it hard into his ear, until he dropped the 'Pot 'o Gold' to the ground.

"Don't you know by now, you silly leprechaun, that all you need to celebrate St. Patrick's Day with is just a Heart 'O Gold, not a Pot 'O Gold?"

And then, poof, he disappeared, and I haven't seen him since, but I have this funny feeling that he will turn up at the Westhampton and Montauk parades, so keep your eye out for him. •

Death On The Highway

What Happened To Those 100 Birds In Bridgehampton That Tuesday Morning

By Jerry Cimisi

The mysterious death of about one hundred starlings in Bridgehampton seemed to have been explained after a preliminary examination by the New York State Department of Environmental Conservation, yet the account of a Sag Harbor man who says he witnessed at least part of this surreal event on Tuesday, February 27 throws another light on the matter.

That Tuesday afternoon, this paper received a call: there were a large number of dead starlings on Montauk Highway on or just off the road across from the offices of the Long Island Power Authority (LIPA) in Bridgehampton.

When I drove past the LIPA offices around 4 o'clock, there appeared at first no evidence of dead birds. Then I saw one just off to the side of the road, still and intact. A moment later another was spotted, at the edge of the road; it had obviously been flattened by a vehicle. This was on the south side of Montauk Highway, which runs along a large field.

Then one noticed a plethora of stains on the road itself; many of these stains were plainly blood, giving clear evidence that something had indeed happened to a lot of small animals.

On the other side of the road, the north side, immediately east of LIPA, was a state conservation officer in a state utility vehicle. He said he'd come on the scene after most of the birds had been cleaned up. He said there had been about sixty birds killed.

It would soon be determined that one hundred birds had died.

Three days later, on Friday, in a phone interview with Mark Lowery of the DEC, he discussed three possibilities that might have killed the birds: poison, electrocution, or being hit by a large vehicle. If the last possibility seemed the most unlikely to kill so many birds, Lowery said it may not be common but it is certainly not rare. Starlings, which often flock tightly together, have been known to accidentally ram into a large vehicle such as a tractor trailer.

"If it were a truck that size the driver probably wouldn't even feel it," said Lowery.

And in fact, examination by the DEC seemed to support such a hypothesis. "The birds appear to have been killed by trauma, such as they could have suffered by hitting a vehicle while they were on the wing," Lowery said.

Poison seemed unlikely, he added, because, "there would be other birds, like grackles, feeding with starlings, but there were only dead starlings."

Nonetheless, the DEC has sent the birds to their pathology lab in Delmare, NY just outside of Albany, to be tested for poison. The results of the tests would be ready in about a week.

And there was no evidence that any of the wire in the vicinity of LIPA could have electrocuted the birds. A LIPA spokesman told the press this could only happen if a bird on a wire were grounded and he had never heard of so many birds being grounded at once.

If, a few days after the large, mysterious die-off, the most plausible explanation seemed the unlikely collision of 100 birds with a truck of some kind, a Sag Harbor man who claimed to be an eyewitness to the event gave an account that threw another light on the matter.

Ginny Frati of the Wildlife Rescue Center of the Hamptons had examined a number of the birds, and found, in each of the birds she examined, blood at the back of throat. The Saturday following the incident, she said, "I'm not arguing they could have died from trauma, but they could have gotten that from falling from a wire, from being made helpless by something else first."

Each of the three possibilities that could have killed the birds – being hit by a truck, poison or electrocution – seems to have a major flaw.

On Wednesday, February 28, The Wildlife Rescue Center put out an appeal on Sag Harbor's WLNG for anyone who had any information about the birds to call the Center.

"We got one call," she said, "from someone who said he had passed by where the birds had died. This was early in the morning, around 7 a.m., and he had seen thousands of birds flocking in that field."

Then there was the call from Francis Hernandez of Sag Harbor, who offered a very interesting account indeed. Speaking with Hernandez on Saturday, March 3, he related what he had told Newsday in an article that had been published on Friday, and added another quite pertinent fact that he had either not shared with Newsday or the paper had omitted from his account of the incident.

More on that in a moment. What Hernandez had told the Wildlife Rescue Center when he called Wednesday was that he had been on the scene that Tuesday as the birds were dying. But it had not occurred in midafternoon, as everyone (including the DEC) at that point had thought, but around eight in the morning.

Interviewed on March 3, Hernandez said he had been going to Southampton, driving west on Montauk Highway, between 7:45 and 8 a.m., when he saw "birds on a wire dropping to the blacktop like leaves."

He added, "They were trying to fly, but they couldn't. When they hit the ground, they were moving around, then they stopped.

"A life is a life," said Hernandez. He pulled off the road, picked up one of the apparently now dead birds. "It was still warm."

Hernandez' account is intriguing because, first of all, he says (and he is definite about this) that he saw the birds dying and it happened early in the morning, but both this paper and the Wildlife Rescue Center were notified about the dead birds after two in the afternoon. It would seem unlikely that that many dead birds would go unremarked upon for six hours, that no motorist called police, an animal organization, etc.

If Hernandez' account is accurate, and he described what he had witnessed with clarity and without hesitation, it would put to rest the tractor explanation for the birds' death, as he saw the birds in the painful process of dying. But what Hernandez saw afterward, when he returned from Southampton, now travelling eastward on Montauk Highway, is also telling.

His account of seeing birds fall from a wire might lend support to the possibility that the birds might have been electrocuted, but when he returned to the spot he saw many birds sitting on what he said was "the same wire, maybe about 300 feet further west."

Nick Parente, who works with the Wildlife Rescue Center, came on the scene about three o'clock. He said. "It was hard to tell how many birds there were, the highway workers were already clearing the road. I picked up eight starlings; they were intact. Rigor mortis had not set in."

This would appear at odds with Hernandez's

The Sheltered Islander

By Sally Flynn

OBSERVATIONS OF AN ISLANDER # 145
"...I FEEL THE EARTH MOVE UNDER MY FEET..."

It was an earthquake that made me a New Yorker. It happened in 1932. My grandparents lived in Los Angeles. My grandfather was making a name as a boxer. My mother was six months old. The big Quake of '32 hit. My grandmother was a young mother with a baby and scared within an inch of her life. So, into a Model T Ford went Mr & Mrs Flynn, their possessions, baby Joanie in a laundry basket, and a cat named Heiney Wertschneitzel. Across America they came until they went as far from Los Angeles as they could get, Long Island.

Last week's big 6.8 point earthquake had it's epicenter in Olympia, Washington, my former home. I don't know how many of my brethren native New Yorkers have lived through an earthquake, but I can tell you, having gone through three big ones, they are the most frightening experience you can have courtesy of mother nature. Unlike anything else, there is absolutely no warning. One minute you're standing, the next, you ain't. My first quake was only a measly little 5.2 pointer, in Eureka, California in 1979. It hit about 11pm and threw me out of bed. I was living in a trailer near campus and the way the trailer shook made it feel like an 8.0 inside the box. It was my first quake. My new husband was born and raised in Los Angeles, he just woke up and said, "It's not a big one," and promptly went back to sleep. I was up the remainder of the night scared and crying as the aftershocks came. The worst part of that night was the radio stations. Californians think earthquakes are funny. The radio played, "I Feel the Earth Move", "Standin' on Shaky Ground", "Shake, Rattle and Roll" and every other inappropriate to the moment song you can think of. I was so mad, I called the station and complained. They laughed at me and said, "Better get used to it..." Not Funny! A clear violation of Quake Etiquette.

I was living in San Rafael, near San Francisco, when the big 7.2 pointer hit there. That was a bad one, even by Californian standards. I recall being in the kitchen, a beautiful morning, about 11am I think. It has been extremely hot for the past three our four days, classic quake weather, in the high 90's and 100's. Suddenly I looked out of the kitchen window and I saw a three foot high -no exaggeration- wave coming through the grass towards me and then the quake hit big. I grabbed my toddler and baby and tried to get outside which is akin to running on a boat deck while it pitches and rolls and theres nothing to grab onto. We made it outside and stayed there through the aftershocks which were at least 5.0 themselves. You always run outside during a quake. In case the house collapses, you don't want to be trapped in the wreckage.

I had a friend who got caught in a bathroom stall during that quake. Although traumatic at the time, her description of being bounced back and forth between the stall walls while trying to wrangle up her panty hose was hysterical. I also heard of a man trying to save his expensive tropical fish which were becoming flying fish as the quake sloshed all the water out of a huge tank.

I myself learned the important lesson of opening cabinets slowly after a quake as contents may shift. I remember a can of beans hitting me dead center on top of my head. Death by beans, what an embarassing epitaph.

The quake was bad enough to close the Golden Gate Bridge. I can't remember any other time when the bridge was closed. My husband was trapped in the city on the other side of the bridge where the quake hit worst. All the phones were out. It was late into the night before he got home, I was never so happy to see headlights in the driveway.

For the most part, San Franciscans handled that quake extremely well. Citizens were standing in intersections directing traffic since all the lights were out. People helping each other shut off the gas mains to the house. In general, everyone was helping everyone else. San Franciscans have excellent Quake Etiquette, "Pardon me, I noticed your living room in your front yard, can I straighten up the lamps for you?"

Like most people, I had a large "F" wrench clamped permanently to our gas main, shutting off the gas was the first thing I did once the kids and I were safe. When the after shocks were over (you hope), we went back in the house and began trying to get information on the radio.

We were visiting my in-laws in Northridge when the big 7.8 quake hit there. The epicenter was was in their back yard. We were in the Kaiser Hospital that collapsed about an hour before the quake getting my daughter treated for a dog bite. Sometimes ya gotta know how lucky you are.

The Los Angelinos were not as cool as the San Franciscans about a quake. Lots of looting instead of helping. They have obviously never read the book of Quake Etiquette.

I'm glad to be in New England, where we have warnings for hurricanes and noreasters. No earthquakes, no tornados, no tsunamis, no monsoons. There's always time to prepare, it's a pleasure, believe me. •

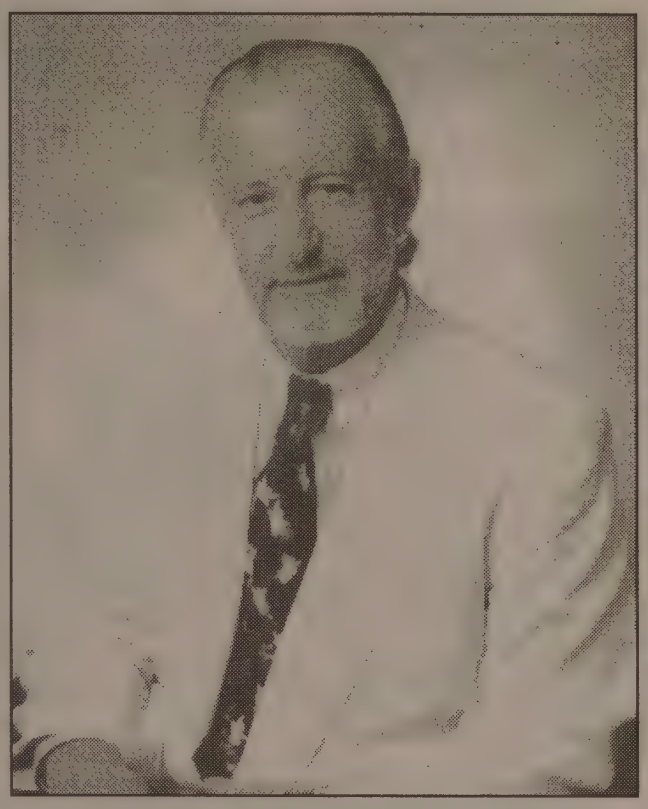
Dan's Papers

If it's happening in the Hamptons, Dan knows about it.

Who's Here:



Jay Sears

Architect

By Roy Bradbrook

As a well known and respected architect, Jay Sears helps people turn their sometimes nebulous dreams of a new house into reality and he has worked with many famous names in the worlds of big business and showbusiness over the years since he came to live in Quogue in 1962. Apart from designing more than fifteen hundred homes, Jay has given his services to many community based projects such as the Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center, and the R.A.P.P. Skateboard Park and he has also worked with Little Flower Children's Home and Westhampton and Quogue Villages.

Jay Sears, though is considerably more than a successful businessman who puts some of his skills back to work for the community he lives in. Volunteering has been a major part of his life for many years and he is obviously very proud of his thirty-six year association with the Quogue Fire Department and the work done with the American Red Cross, particularly at the time of the tragic crash of Flight 800.

Back in 1978 Jay's life was spared when he decided not to take a flight to the West Coast and the plane he had been booked on crashed. "This really caused me to re-evaluate my life and it was clear to me that I had been spared to bring help to others," he told me. Then another turning point for him came while he was driving back to Quogue from New York City in 1996. "I had been leading a program called the Midnight Run, which takes groups of young people from Long Island onto the streets of Manhattan to help the homeless. On the way back home it suddenly came to me that there was also a pressing need to help the less fortunate here in our area. From this came The Mission of Kindness, which was created using an all volunteer work force that started reaching out to the poor and the needy in whatever ways we could. We started in a very small way with clothes and food and moved on to working with the shelters and now the work is very diverse. For example, we helped a family in the area where a mother who had looked after over twenty foster children was terminally ill with cancer and in imminent danger of eviction. Fifteen families brought food several times a week to the family and we managed to keep her home life together until a new home could be found. It really has been amazing how this has taken off and now we see all the time that the more we give away, the more the donations roll in. Every cent of every donation is used to help because everyone is a volunteer and there are no expenses."

Families who have lost everything in house fires, people with serious medical problems and no means of paying for treatment, families unable to pay for the funeral of a loved one, the list is long and heartbreaking. Recently, the Mission Of Kindness was granted tax exempt status and Jay hopes that now they will be able to start some fund raising to help expand their outreach programs.

Jay Sears is a man with a deep belief in the inherent goodness of people, especially children, and this brought about the second role of the Mission of Kindness. "In many ways, this to me is the more important because the way that our children grow up and the values they have determines the type of society they will live in. People who know me well know that Mother Teresa is my favorite person and teacher of all time and her famous saying, 'Do ordinary things with extraordinary love' has formed the basis of the work we are doing with children."

Kindness and Tolerance are the keywords for Jay Sears as he goes into schools all over Long Island to teach the importance of these in their daily lives. "We have to offset the violence they are used to seeing in their everyday lives and also to realize that problems often come about because of the lack of families and of family values. Kids are often bored and have low self-esteem. Drugs, alcohol and the worst sides of the media all offer negative values to them. Sometimes it's easy to feel like a David against an enormous Goliath but you have to really believe that one person can start to make a difference and that the power of love and kindness can then spread though a community."

Many schools across Long Island have welcomed Jay into the classrooms to explore the ways in which kindness and tolerance can become more of an integral part of their lives. "The programs we set up encourage them to go out into the community to experience what it is like to help others, whether it is going into nursing homes, helping in soup kitchens, collecting clothes and toys for the needy and so on. Kids seem to listen because I come in from the outside world. They don't know me or have any preconceived ideas. It is wonderful to see how more and more schools are developing programs which will continue to bring home the message of kindness and tolerance to students . In some schools they have made this a regular part of their curriculum and Newsday, now, is doing a very good job with its 'Future Corps' program."

Jay Sears will have another public platform for spreading his message of love to thousands more, when, as Grand Marshall, he heads the St. Patrick's Day Parade in Westhampton Beach on March 10th with its theme of 'Kindness Can Change the World.' Many local people already will have met Jay and his team of volunteers on Kindness Day each year when they go about Quogue spreading their message of kindness and tolerance and many more will have seen the segment broadcast on Channel 2 News on Christmas Day when Jay and his work were highlighted in the 'Hometown Hero' series.

Looking back on his varied and interesting life, Jay commented, " I always had dreams about being a city planner and making life more livable. I still believe that the best of my architectural work lies ahead of me. I truly believe that I am being lead into combining the Mission for Kindness with being an architect. I am not sure about the exact form this will take but I can feel that I am being led this way."

Jay Sears, sometimes whimsically portrayed wearing angel-like wings given to him at a sixtieth birthday celebration recently, knows he cannot totally change the world or our society by himself but that will never stop him from trying. He often tells about the number of times he has been saved in his life from perils. As we finished our talk, he laughed and said, "Perhaps I really was intended for this work. After all, I was saved before I was born, when my pregnant mother was rescued from the floods following the hurricane of 1938.

Sir Christopher Wren's greatest architectural creation was St. Paul's Cathedral in London and after his death his son made an inscription there, 'Si monumentum requiris, circumspice'. (If you are looking for his monument, look around you.) When I asked Jay how he would like to be remembered, he thought for a moment and replied, "That I left a lot of love behind rather than a lot of buildings. Buildings decay but love never dies or decays." • claim that he saw the birds killed over six hours earlier, around eight in the morning.

Mr. Parente added, "There were birds on both sides of the road. If they all were hit by a truck they would have been found in the same area. It seems hard to believe they were killed by a truck. Starlings always feed by the side of the road; they are usually wise to traffic."

He went on, "I went into the fields on either side of the road. If this had been poison there would have been other dead birds. There weren't."

Thus the matter so far. Each of the three possibilities that could have killed the birds – being hit by a truck, poison or electrocution – seems to have a major flaw. And there seems to be a major discrepancy as to when the event occurred. As Ginny Frati of the Wildlife Rescue Center put it, "It's a mystery." •

Kimberly Pilson Becomes Engaged In 1998 And, Finding No Wedding Resources Online, Creates Her Own

By Susan Simm

Back in 1992, when my husband David and I got married in Bridgehampton and held our reception at what was then the Post House in Southampton, no one really knew much about the "Internet." David had grown up out here in this beautiful place known as the "Hamptons" and I had moved out here full time in 1986. We were running a very successful specialty food store and catering business and so we knew, not only all of the best locations and vendors for all of our wedding needs, but also most of the plusses and minuses associated with each.

Today as then, the Hamptons are a popular and beautiful place to get married. But if you are unfamiliar with the area, either because you're a part-time resident or because you've only visited once or twice, how do you go about researching locations, sources and all of the many other needs associated with a wedding?

> "Since I was a child, I have spent several memorable summers in the Hamptons. I always envisioned being married there."

Kimberly Pilson-Fitzgerald has come up with a unique idea for providing answers to all of these questions: HamptonsWeddings.com. "From the moment a couple becomes engaged until the day they leave for their honeymoon, HamptonsWeddings.com has all the information they need for planning a perfect wedding in the Hamptons at their fingertips," said Kim in a recent telephone interview.

The site does indeed contain lots of information, including articles by wedding professionals about everything from choosing flowers to choosing the best time of year for your special event (Autumn).

On the site you will find links for local resources as well as client feedback and an "Articles & Advice" link that provides very interesting information about wedding gown preservation and advice on how to "bring the wedding planning process to TV." There is even an artcile about Feng Shui Weddings. "Hints for Selecting Flowers for your Big Day" discusses which flowers will be in season when the wedding will take place; the availability of certain flowers may convince you to plan for a different time of year if this is really important to you.

Two other links under "Local Resources" that will be extremely helpful to couples planning an East End wedding are "Officiants/Churches" and "Marriage Licenses." These listings provide important, and sometimes overlooked until the last minute information (such as how and where to obtain the marriage license), with the ease of a left click.

Internet businesses are still relatively new and, despite the recent demise of many dot-coms, they are clearly a part of our future as well as our present.

I asked Kim several questions about her e-business. Following are some of her responses.

Q. How did you come up with the idea for HamptonsWeddings.com?

A. Since I was a child, I have spent several memorable summers in the Hamptons. I always envisioned that I would someday be married there. When my husband, Robert, and I became engaged in September 1998 we immediately turned to the Internet to search for local wedding resources. We were amazed to discover that there was virtually NO information available. Realizing that there was a void to be filled, I created HamptonsWeddings.com. Besides, traveling on the Internet to plan your Hamptons wedding is a lot easier than traveling on the LIE!

Q. How long has the site been on the Internet?

A. It was launched in December of 1999.

Q. What type of feedback have you received?

A. Statistically, we receive between 20,000 and 30,000 hits per month. The hits are primarily from the New York area, however, some are from other parts of the country and there are even several from other parts of the world. Engaged couples who want to be married in the Hamptons have expressed how helpful the editorial and general content of the site has been during their wedding planning process.

Q. What are the different ways that local businesses can benefit by exposure on your site?

A. There are several different advertising options. A local business can simply have their name and telephone number listed under a specific category. They can have a link to their email or website, or for broader exposure, there is a choice of three different size banner ads.

Q. How do you promote HamptonsWeddings.com?

A. We are signed up with the top 20 search engines. When a couple does a search using key words such as "Hamptons" and "brides" or "weddings" on a particular search engine, HamptonsWeddings.com will automatically appear on that search. We also advertise the site in local publications, like Dan's Papers.

Q. Why do you think the Hamptons are such a popular location for weddings?

A. The Hamptons are well known for their beautiful beaches and natural beauty. What a perfect backdrop for two people in love to make the commitment of a lifetime! ●

Love Lessons

Author And Columnist Lois Smith Brady Shares Love Lessons She's Learned Over The Years

By Joan Zandell

Lois Smith Brady, author of the popular national New York Times column, "Vows", has made a career of interviewing couples about how they met and how they've traveled their paths from their first meeting to their trip to the alter. A resident of Brideghampton, Lois took time out from her hectic schedule to speak to us about her life, her feelings about love and her book, Love Lessons.

In Love Lessons, Lois uses a quote to talk about what she sees as the real thing; "Being in love is like seeing a ghost – a lot of people talk about it but few have ever seen it." I asked her what was the quality of that kind of love?

"They have this attitude that they can't believe that they've lucked out and they get to hang out with this other woman or man, whichever it is. I think those are the ones who have really found it. It's like they got a part in a movie they've always wanted, so they've got their dream. I come across that once a year, so I realize it's unusual. They say, ' I can't believe I get to spend the rest of my life with this person.' They're just so psyched. Instead of being nervous, they're just overwhelmingly happy.

"There was a couple: she was a stewardess and he was an investment banker. They met flying. After 11 days he asked her to marry him. And she said, 'When someone asks you to marry them, you shouldn't have to weigh the pros and cons, you should just jump in with all your heart and say yes. There should be no doubt.' The ones who have 'it' have no doubts."

Lois says that she's become so much more romantic since she began writing the "Vows" column. As a matter of fact, at the time of this interview she was writing the story about a couple who came from the same hometown outside of Detroit, Michigan. "They'd gone to the same private high school together. His great grandfather was the founder of General Motors and Motts Applesauce – he was ultra rich. Her father was a steel salesman – they were middle class people. She was unattractive and overweight and totally in love with him and all throughout high school didn't have the nerve to talk to him. He used to sit next to a beautiful girl in math class and she'd find herself thinking, 'you don't like her, you like me'. Throughout high school they had no relationship.

> "A minister once told me, 'The person we marry is a stranger about whom we have a magnificent hunch.'"

"Eleven years went by and they both ended up in New York City. She ended up in the fashion business and he was a struggling actor. Then she spotted him in a coffee shop in New York one day! She recognized him, but he had no idea who she was, he didn't remember her at all. So she starts up a conversation. She is working for Isaac Mizrahi now, and she's dyed her hair blond and has turned into a groovy, artsy New Yorker. And so, they begin a friendship.

"It took six years. She became his confidante, and had to listen to all his stories about all his girlfriends for six years! The whole time she was wishing and hoping, wishing and hoping that he would see the light. And finally, one day it happened. She was sobbing at her wedding. It was like an unbelievable thing for her."

Lois is so clearly moved by the people she writes about, she continued enthusiastically, "I just love these underdog stories! There's another story I love, about a woman who moved to New York City from California – gave up her job, her friends and family to be with her boyfriend. He dumped her two weeks after she got here. There she was on the Upper East Side after he had broken up with her – on her lunch break – she's walking down the street sobbing. At the same time, a man was driving by in a taxicab on Second Avenue. Now his brother had just died a couple of weeks earlier and he was sitting in traffic, in a very mystical kind of a mood, and he looked out the window and saw her and was immediately taken by her. He got out of the cab and chased her for five blocks. She thought, 'Who is this weirdo?' He managed to convince her to give him her business card. Well, he tracked her down, she still thinks that he's some kind of weirdo, but he manages to get her to go out on a date with him. It turns out he's a tremendously successful investment banker. I can't help but think about all these women running around New York trying to figure out how to put themselves in the paths of wealthy men. I just love it when it doesn't happen that way. Here, this man finds his wife in the most strange and unpredictable way. That, to me, has to be love, it's nothing else.

"So that's why I've become such a romantic. We're so cynical, I think. We doubt the existence of love. We tend to think, 'Oh she connived him into it...' when in truth, people come together for reasons of the heart. Those are my favorite kinds of stories. The amazing thing is that they happen all the time. I find that the people who have had hard lives appreciate who they find because they've gained a lot from their experiences and it's wonderful to see them recognized."

When asked how writing the "Vows" column has affected her marriage, she exclaims, "Oh my God! It's made me a better wife listening to all those vows! Well, my husband and I are just best buddies. There is no one I'd rather meet for a glass of wine at the end of the day. He can always, always, crack me up regardless of how bad a mood I'm in.

"I'm in a really great friendship/marriage, I would say. There's all this love flowing out. I've never questioned my own marriage. I guess everybody has their own kind of love, and mine is a good buddy kind of love. I was never the kind of person who liked flowers. To every boyfriend I'd say, 'Forget the flowers – bring me a flask of whiskey!' I'm very straightforward. It took me a while to mull over that question. I guess I'm not romantic like that. It's like a little lesson about marriage when you go to weddings all the time like I do. There's all this serious talk about commitment and staying together and connection- in that sense, it's made me a better wife I think. I've learned a lot."

In her book Love Lessons, Lois Brady Smith tells the story of her wedding, which was a total fiasco. I ask her if she had it to do over again, how would she do it this time?

"I would definitely have one, huge, round table with all my friends around it. Small enough so that one person could yell to the person at the other end. It would be on the beach in Bridgehampton or Sagaponack in July or August with that honeysuckle, yellow light everywhere, and there would be grilled food. There's nothing better than all your best buddies around a table in the sand, on the beach. The biggest mistake I made – it never occurred to me to cross-examine the minister about what he planned to say. I just assumed it would be something uplifting and inspiring and poetic. Instead it was this disastrous last act as a minister prior to his retirement. All I could remember was the image of this penguin escaping to his car. It was a nightmare.

"I've noticed now with many couples, they sit down and supply the minister with what they want said at their wedding with all the readings – they provide him with a script to their wedding. That's what I would do this time."

When asked what she's learned from writing her column, Lois responds, "I've learned some people marry without love. I've learned it's impossible to predict how long love will last. A minister once told me, ' The person we marry is a stranger about whom we have a magnificent hunch.' That's my favorite quote on marriage."

What does she hope people will take away after reading Love Lessons?

"I hope people are 'gutsier' about love – more willing to talk to a cute stranger on an airplane, more hopeful and more courageous. If anything, writing "Vows" has taught me the importance of going for it – in life and love."

Lois Smith Brady is best known for her "Vows" column in The New York Times which she has written since 1992. (That's 350 weddings, but who's counting?) She has also written for Glamour, Harper's Bazaar, Cosmopolitan, Mademoiselle and Esquire. Lois Smith Brady lives in Bridgehampton, New York with her husband and two sons. Love Lessons Twelve Real-Life Stories is published by Simon and Schuster. •

Event Coordinators Make Planning Your Wedding A Piece Of Cake

By Joe Carney

The Hamptons have become a "hot spot" destination for seasonal weddings. What makes a Hamptons wedding so special? For those who have a palate for taste and beauty, the vineyards along the North and South Forks add a unique flavor to special occasions. Breathtaking sunsets, white sandy beaches, private personal residencies, fresh air and the quaint little hamlets throughout the Hamptons attract more and more bride and grooms-to-be each year.

However, many of these idyllic settings have become competitive "hotspots." Competitive meaning everyone wants the perfect location for their wedding reception and these perfect locations are often booked a year in advance. Choosing a venue in the Hamptons that suits the couples' personal style, taste and budget is the most important step in planning the perfect wedding. It sets the tone of the occasion. Professional wedding planners on the East End are knowledgeable about these special locations available for weddings from casual to formal, small to grand.

Planning one's own wedding can add needless stress and anxiety to one of life's most treasured moments. Time, efficiency and cost effectiveness are reasons why more couples are choosing to hire wedding planners who will take care of the endless phone calls, consultation meetings with suppliers, reference checks, comparing and contrasting prices and contracts with caterers, florists, décor companies, invitations, photographers, videographers, rental suppliers, ceremony and reception locations, bands and orchestras, entertainment, transportation, accommodations, hair stylists, make-up artists, etc.

It is very stressful for a bride and groom-to-be to consider taking on all of this, when many young women today have busy work schedules that place demands on them almost up until the time when they finally walk down the aisle. In fact, I've often heard brides who have planned and coordinated their own wedding say it is a full time job. The bride's part of planning her wedding should be the "fun" time.

By turning over the not-so-fun part to a professional, she is ensuring that this time is, indeed, precious for her and for her fiancé. She can also place into the hands of her wedding planner those difficult occasions that arise when other members of the family, well meaning as they may be, think they know "how things should be done." The wise bride can defer to her chosen "professional" for decisions at these times and keep a gracious distance and the families at peace. When a prospective bride and groom come to me, asking about my services, I can remind them of all of the above. But on a more personal note, I tell them to think of hiring a wedding planner, like myself, as a personal assistant, or as an architect and contractor in charge of planning their special day, finding the ways and means to make it exactly as they have always envisioned their wedding day to be.

It is important that brides and grooms share with their chosen wedding planner how they envision this special day in their life lives. What is the most personal aspect of it for them? A wedding planner can make suggestions, but it is ultimately up to the bride and the groom to make the decisions that reflect their personal style and tastes. These decisions will be their "signature" on their wedding day that truly marks the beginning of their life together forever. •

review: couples

By Joan Zandell

Webster's New Collegiate Dictionary defines commitment as: to connect, entrust, an agreement or pledge, the state of being emotionally impelled.

At a time when the majority of marriages end in divorce, Couples: A Celebration Of Commitment, a collaboration between writer Catherine Whitney and photographer MI Hamburg, is a refreshing and meaningful look at marriages that last. Right off the bat, through Whitney's insightful interviews and MI Hamburg's beautiful black and white photographs, you become aware of several factors. These are couples who talk to one another, listen to one another, respect one another and delight in one another's company. When asked if they could define the "glue" that holds their union together, they respond that it is an immediate "knowing" that this is the person they want to be with, and that life without their partner is inconceivable. In a way, it is finding your better half in the other, whom you really, really like a lot, and to whom you feel impelled to entrust your life's journey.

There are marked similarities between the couples. In some cases, from the first moment that they see the other person, they are aware that this is the man or woman they will marry. Mario Cuomo claims that he knew he would marry the girl with the beautiful dark hair who sat in front of him in class, before he ever saw her face. Then there is all the talking that these people do together. Without question, every single couple loves an exchange of ideas, and takes particular pleasure in an intellectual interchange with their spouse.

All agree that traveling the road of commitment is not without its challenges. There is the stress as well as the joy of child rearing, illnesses to overcome, the deaths of loved ones to absorb, in addition to the occasional marital disappointment. But what seems to set these couples apart is, that while the darker aspect of life may rear its head, neither member of the couple ever considers walking out the door. Leaving is simply never seriously considered as an option. All the unions have one thing in common: the bond of enduring love and loyalty.

Among the illustrious couples interviewed are Gail Sheehy and Clay Felker, Bill and Judith Moyers, Barbara Smith and Dan Gasby, Steve and Cokie Roberts, Geraldine Ferraro and John Zaccaro, Adolph Green and Phyllis Newman, Governor Mario and Matilda Raffa Cuomo, Avery and Judy Corman, not to mention Joan and Mort Hamburg, and many others. Inevitably, they talk about how they met and how long, or not, it took to know that this person was "the one". In some instances, initially the timing was off, taking years, with failed careers and marriages somewhere in the middle needing to end, before fate could intervene to bring the couple together.

Many of the couples in this book are East End couples you have seen about town, quietly doing their own thing. Now, perhaps the next time you see them purchasing that smelly French cheese at Citarella, you'll view them with newfound admiration knowing that they have uncovered a secret to life that you might have yet to unearth. Maybe they'll even be willing to offer a word or two of advice, after they've swung around the corner to where their partner is waiting for them quietly ensconced in the olive section.

Or better yet, simply pick up your own copy of Couples: A Celebration Of Commitment, and linger over the photographs and text to your heart's content, savoring the old-fashioned and unfashionably romantic notion of finding that certain someone, that elusive soul-mate, with whom you are destined to walk hand in hand through life, and then once found, having the courage to live that dream together. •

Perfect Make-Up For Your Special Day

By Annette Gunnels

Once in a lifetime you want yourself to remain timeless. This day is the day! You will be photographed left and right, from amateurs to the professionals. Not to mention the videos! You want your makeup to appear natural and yet 'there'. You don't want it to scream 2001, twenty years from now. So going the natural route is the best.

I would say the biggest common mistake I have seen brides make, and not necessarily by them, but by their makeup artists, is shine. It is the camera's number one enemy on a face. Everyone has the impression that the bride should have a dewy look and instead the camera picks it up as sweat or grease. When for instance, you use a blush on your cheeks that is a cream and it has a slight gloss to it, on the camera the eye will see it as being projected forward. So the cheeks will appear as two shined apples. Same for lips, keep them matte, at least for the ceremony and photos. Point to remember here, light brings forward, dark recedes.

At the reception you will probably touch it up and at that time you can add your shine, if you must. So you want to start with a foundation that is matte as possible without being drying. My personal favorite cosmetic for brides and even members of the bridal party is Mac.

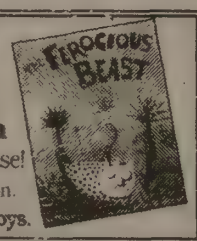
Come in to see our newest books and toys.



Head for their nearest counter and look over the most beautiful array of shades this side of heaven! StudioFix is a wonderful foundation that is both a powder and foundation. For $21.50, you get a generous supply. They also sell a product called MacMatte which is applied after the moisturizer and before the foundation. Remember to check your colors in daylight, which means you may have to run in and out of the store.

When makeup artists do makeup for studios and the lighting is faulty, we take the model to the window and apply it in natural daylight, which is the closest to the lighting being used on the set. The same can be applied to the bride and the party. It will appear a little washed out near the window so you can use a slightly heavy hand at this time. Remember that you will be using neutral, natural colors so you can afford a little more. When I say more, I mean color intensity and not more in amount. Mac's Dusty Rose blush is just perfect for the bride and there are a huge assortment of eyeshadows and lipcolors to compliment it and match. Try to stay away from browns and grays, which can appear, aging and dull. Opt for the mauves instead of your brown for contouring the eye and pinks or even peach for the lips, cheeks and shadows. Keep your powder nearby for occasional touchups. Blot with a tissue first and dab, don't swipe, your puff across the nose, upper cheeks, and forehead.

Your nails can be French manicured which give the neatest clean appearance. That too should be not overdone with dagger artificial nails. It screams 90s! If you must go with the artificial nails, get the sport length. It will be much easier for you to keep before and after the wedding. Make sure you apply at least two coats of clear no chip formula polish the night before. French manicures can either be pink or white. I prefer the white by Orly. It is sort of a milky color, which lends to the natural look you are trying to achieve.

Now here is a nice touch to pick up also at Mac. It is a sort of pigment that can be applied to the face at the reception after photos for freshened look. It is simply called Pigment and the two colors to try would be Frost or White. This is applied to the upper cheek and brow. It gives a beautiful sheen to the face, a real youthful glow without color. Remember though, what this will do to you from a camera's viewpoint. This is why I used it for clients at the reception. It costs about $18.

You need not buy the most expensive makeup at the cosmetic counters. Just the ones that will do the job and who knows, you may decide this is your new look! I also suggest that the bridal party follow suit with the makeup with slight color variations but the same intensity. Most brides pick up little gifts for their bridal party, and what better way to say thank you than by picking up little packages of the makeup for them.

If you are having your makeup professionally done, you can ask that the artist use your chosen colors. Not only will you be sure that they are used by only you, you will have them for your use the entire day for touchups. This is a beautiful day, one to be remembered always. Having it reflect in your photos is one way to ensure this. •

My Grandmother's Wedding Dress

By Sharon Coffin

I have always dreamed of my wedding day as being a fairytale. Whether a little girl or as an adult, there has been a portrait painted of how I will look on this special day.

I became engaged on June 28, 2000 and instantaneously, my thoughts reverted back to that moment I've always dreamed of, when I'm walking down the isle in a white, sultry gown. My second thought was, how will I look to my husband-to-be and the 200+ guests that will be invited to share this day with us. I will be geographically the center of attention, all eyes will be fastened on me for the 30 steps down the isle, so I should look 110% percent.

To start the gown process, I bought every bride magazine and began tearing my favorite styles out of every book. Moments later, in excitement, I showed them to my mother and in return got some strange looks and deep sighs. "You can't wear a strapless gown in church and anyway, you have big arms." It already started, my mother would like to see me in a neck to toe, 1800s dress. I'm in trouble and I don't have big arms.

The week that I chose to begin the dress hunt my mother happened to be on vacation. I began my search at Bergdorf's in NYC. I wanted to try on the best and most expensive gowns, learn the wedding lingo and feel like this is the most important day of my life. I tried on designer gowns ranging from $3,500 to $15,000, each one was more beautiful than the next and the sales service was extraordinary. My mother soon returned from her vacation and I told her about the beautiful gowns. She grinned and led me up to the attic, there was something she would like me to see. We began our climb up the stairs and reached a cedar chest. My mother opened the chest and pulled out some tattered paper and carried it down the stairs to her bedroom. There, she opened the paper and revealed a cream satin and lace bridal gown. It was my grandmother's gown from the 1930s and it fit perfectly except it had long sleeves and huge shoulders. My shoulders looked a cross between Queen Elizabeth's and those horrible 1980s shoulder pads. I felt uncomfortable and began to make jokes at the dress. My mother than began to tell me that the sleeves are called leg-o-mutton sleeves and this was the style in the 1930s. Even though I have never met my grandmother and my mother would love me to have my arms covered, there was no way I would wear this on my wedding day. The body of the gown was actually beautiful but the top would need to be totally reconstructed.

I continued to look at gowns and told my mother that I would keep her mother's gown in mind. The search for a gown and the prices that I was seeing led me to the idea of possibly renting a gown. Men rent tuxedos, women borrow jewelry, why cant I rent a gown? I did my research and found a shop in Manhattan, Just Once, which specializes in renting and purchasing gowns on consignment. I made an appointment with Fran and tried on over 20 gowns, most of them designer gowns. At Just Once I was treated fabulously and Fran continued to bring in gowns that I didn't grab off the rack but she thought would look good on my body frame; just like the Nordstrom shoe department. Just Once's business is like a revolving sample sale; there is always new inventory. Just Once alters all the gowns on the rack, and if you see something you like but does not fit, Rob will recreate the gown.

After a few months of trying on over 50 gowns I didn't find anything that I truly loved so I resorted back to my grandmother's leg-o-mutton sleeve dress. I thought that if I took off the sleeves, brought down the neckline, basically took off the top of the dress, it would be wearable. Rob at Just Once, told me to bring in the dress and we would see if we could find a style top that is flattering on me and if it can be done. Three weeks later, I was back in the antique dress and the tremendous sleeves were being taken off stitch by stitch. The dress, like a caterpillar, was becoming a beautiful butterfly. The sleeves dissappeared, the neckline plunged, the back opened up and MY GOD there I was, in my wedding gown. Rob was happy because he was doing what he does best: creating. My mother was joyful since her mother was going to be with us in spirit for this special day. I was ecstatic, this archaic dress was being updated, molded to my body and I could picture myself in the recreated gown walking down the isle looking as beautiful as ever for my husband-to-be. ●

CLASSIC CARS WITH BOB GELBER

For the last two columns I've been talking about what I believe are a good selection of classic cars to collect. Having properly covered the various models of Jags, MOs and Porsches and even threw in a short-bed step-side pick-up and a Caddy '59 fintail for balance, here are some excellent collectables that are not quite as mainstream as the above mentioned vehicles.

Aston Martin and Maserati Even though the Aston is as British as they come, and the Maserati is as Italian as pasta, they have similar collector appeal. It seems both these vehicles have always been bridesmaids to Ferrari. In the world of super cars, no manufacturer (including Lamborghini) even comes close to the Ferrari mystique. Aston-Martin and Maserati did build some special racing models that are highly prized and very valuable, but all of the touring cars built by both companies have dismal collector appreciation.

Because of this, some real bargains can be had. The Aston-Martin DBS can be bought for as little as $10,000 and a Maserati Mexico routinely sells for under $20,000. Both of these cars have looks and performance that makes one's heart flutter, but be aware of one simple fact; they are very expensive to keep running.

Unfortunately, these cars weren't very dependable when new, so you can imagine what problems you might have with them when they are twenty to thirty years old. I owned a DBS Aston Martin for one week. When it comes to automotive grief,like the Shadow... I know!

Triumph TR-4s and Austin Healy Both these British models defined the mainstream sports car in the 50s, 60s and early 70s. They are both affordable today and parts are fairly priced and readily available. My personal favorites of the pair would be a Healy 100 series two, with the four speed transmission and overdrive. Even though this car has an engine that was derived from a farm tractor (and it sounds like it!), this model is much prettier than the 6 cylinder "big" Austin Healys. I've always liked the first series Triumph TR-4. It has a pure and simple Italian-designed body, and was not tailed-up like the later TR series of cars. Go for the solid rear suspension on any TR-4. They produced an independent rear end that was of very poor (read : dangerous) design.

'49-'51 Fords and Chevys 1949 was a pivotal year for most of the automotive industry. This was when everybody was producing their first post-war newly designed cars. Today, that era Ford is more coveted then the Chevrolets of the period. However, both companies built some very beautiful cars. As can be expected, the convertibles are the most valuable, with one unusual exception- the Ford Wooden Country Squire Station Wagon. Woodies have really caught on, and mint examples can fetch as much as fifty thousand dollars. Do note that Chevrolet made a station wagon at this time, but it was all metal with wood decals. They are worth only about $10,000. I personally love the looks of the '49 Ford business coupe. It has a long trunk, reminiscent of the Ford coupes of the 30s. This is a landmark design, quite simple and beautiful.

It is also hard for me to talk about the '49-'51 Fords and not mention the impressive "Flathead' engine that powered these cars. These little V-8 motors were one of the greatest engines put into a mass produced car.They were so quiet, that even with the hood open, standing over the engine, you could not hear them. They ran forever, and were simple to fix. These engines became legends in their own time and at one point powered more race cars then any engine ever built.

Another car of this period that has captured everyone's attention is the '49-'51 Mercury coupe.

This was James Dean's ride in Rebel Without a Cause. Sly Stallone also drove one in Cobra.

Besides being a beautiful car, the Mercury coupe used the same Flathead engine that powered all Fords. Merc' Coupes have become very valuable. If you can find an unmolested example (lots of them have been customized and hot-rodded), plan to spend around $25,000.

There are many great cars to buy. If I were to win the lottery, I'd include in my collection some oddballs like: '61 Alfa Sprint Speciale, '53 Studebaker Coupe, '39 Lincoln Zepher coupe, '61 FiatAbarth, '36Cord 810, '61 Lancia B-Z0 Spyder, '40 Lincoln Continental convertible and all the racing Ferraris and Porsches I could find.

So little time and money. So many cars.

ART COMMENTARY

With Marion Wolberg Weiss

CONVERSATIONS WITH: ARTIST/ACTOR
(Part 1 in a series devoted to integration of the arts)

Both East Hampton's Beryl Bernay and Dennis Leri represent double threats – individuals whose training and experience span two art forms, particularly painting and acting. Ms. Bernay has had more acting experience than Mr. Leri, studying with well-known teachers like Herbert Berghof and Joseph Anthony and appearing in live dramas during TV's Golden Age. Her career also took her to Broadway and Paris, where she played "various Latin prostitutes and circus performers" because of her physical demeanor.

Ms. Bernay laughs when recalling those days as a victim of typecasting, but she remembers them fondly, too. "There came a point when I had to choose between acting and painting, and I chose painting," she says. "Acting requires a totally different part of yourself; painting is my soul at the height of a love affair – with all the ups and downs of an affair."

Ms. Bernay is quick to point out other differences between acting and painting. "In painting, ego has nothing to do with it; your self is 'out of there.' In acting, you become the person you are playing Acting is performance, being an extraovert. Painting is being an introvert. Acting is a craft; you don't have to be creative as an actor. Painting is much more honest."

Besides painting, Ms. Bernay is an experienced journalist who also writes poerty and prose, two writing forms she feels strongly about. "The intellect is an important part of acting, and it's emotional, but emotions go to the depth of your soul in painting and poetry."

Dennis Leri

Unlike Ms. Bernay, Dennis Leri sees his acting experience more directly related to painting. While his performing background was not as extensive as Ms. Bernay's, he found that his five years as a student (working with teachers like Sandy Meisner) were beneficial, nonetheless. "In the beginning I saw acting as a whim; I was a working contractor and had little opportunity to have many conversations with people. At the same time, I was making sculpture, working out of other people's studios since I didn't have one of my own. "

Acting represented a "great relief" for Mr. Leri, a chance to interact and to express emotions. Even so, it also became a way for him to tell stories using improvisation, elements that would become important in his paintings. "My own works tell a story," he explains. "They are improvised, spontaneous, coming from feelings within me."

The emotional power of painting is one element that both Ms. Bernay and Mr. Leri agree on, that's for sure. Their interest in poetry is another commonality. "Often I need words to complete what I'm trying to say in a painting, Mr. Leri notes. "That's why I create combinations of images and written works.

"Another aspect of acting that's helped me is all the auditions I used to go on. That's preparted me for going to galleries to show my work. Auditions can be brutal. They prepare you for anything."

Honoring the Artist: David Tyndall

While painter David Tyndall has lived in Beverly Hills, Michigan (not to be confused with Beverly Hills, California) for several years, he still has close ties to the East End. After all, not only did both his father and grandfather live in a quaint, historic house on Church Lane in Bridgehampton, but his great grandfather had built it many years before. Even now, the house serves as a summer place when Mr. Tyndall, his wife, and their four children visit here.

The East End holds other memories for Mr. Tyndall. "I was born on Long Island, in Cold Springs," he notes, "but I still remember the rural scenes here, those little, strange places of quiet. I've been on every country road. When I come back now, it's harder to find those lovely scenes, although my Dad does know some of the farms and I can have access to them. When I get back to Michigan to paint, I'm still trying to capture that feeling of old places."

Mr. Tyndall's penchant for "old places" extends beyond his past and present memories of the East End. "We have the oldest house in our village," he explains. "It was built in 1896 and was originally a carriage house on a farm. I like stripping the floors, doing woodworking, things like that."

There's another aspect of Mr. Tyndall's life, however, that belies his peaceful existence at home. This occurs when he periodically goes to New York to work for the well-known artist, Jeff Koons.

"I first started working for Jeff in 1995. Although I had previously been an advertising illustrator, I had started painting on my own for a year using my background in fine arts. I saw an ad for photorealist painters and I thought, 'It would be nice to be in New York, to see the latest things.' So I applied and got hired, along wih about thirty other people. I learned a lot from that experience."

Mr. Tyndall is still learning a lot when he goes to work at Mr. Koons' studio: "Jeff doesn't limit himself," he remarks with enthusiasm. "If he thinks there's a better way, he'll go for it. 'Do what you need to do,' he says."

Besides absorbing Mr. Koons' philosophy of life, Mr. Tyndall also has become familiar with Mr. Koons' techniques, particularly his use of computers and collage imagery. While Mr. Tyndall has been doing detail work on Mr. Koons' latest large paintings, he's more sure than ever that Photorealism is the direction he wants to pursue. Most importantly, he feels more confidant as a result of his experience with Mr. Koons.

Despite Mr. Tyndall's duel attraction to both Michigan and New York, he says that he and his wife have talked about moving to Manhattan. The only thing stopping them is consideration for their young children.

But anything is possible, according to Mr. Tyndall. "I have a dream that in ten years, I might have my own gallery. I'm not sure I want to go into the selling part, but who knows?"

–Marion Wolberg Weiss

David Tyndall's work can be seen at Southampton's Chrysalis Gallery.

Guy de Fraumeni's HOLLYWOOD in The Hamptons

Monkeybones • Down To Earth

"It's a MECHAIEH" is a phrase heard less frequently around Hollywood these days. No, mechaieh is not necessarily a typographical error . . . for those not versed in the truly international language, Yiddish . . . it is pronounced, meh-ch-ch-hi-ya . . . the ch sounding as if you're bringing up phlegm. A mechaieh is an unexpected blessing. For instance, out here on the East End (Real Estate Heaven and Hell), if you find a really incredibly good deal on property. . . that's good luck. If it's south of the highway . . . that's a mechaieh! Although property values in the movies are also sky-high . . . the movies themselves have not produced mechaiehs. There are a few blockbusters. Take Hannibal... grossing gazillions but, look at the property. Florence, Italy's most prominent piazza and edifice for a hanging and disembowelment (right next to David ... also hanging out there in bold relief.) And, for Hannibal's frenzied hog feeding (pigging out on live villains)... no less than the Virginia estate of fourth President, James Madison, wherein dined stars like Thomas Jefferson and Lafayette.

So, this week's fare isn't that grand and glorious but, the mild comedy/fantasies DOWN TO EARTH and MONKEYBONE, as compared to the recent run of witless, low, below-the-belt, padded with raunch, would-be farces... Earth and Monkey almost produce a kvell of delight. . . mechaieh or no mechaieh. If you're finding Yiddish difficult, wait 'til you encounter the Black idiom as expounded by Chris Rock as a very nice young man whose life-long ambition is to be a winning stand-up comic at Harlem's Apollo Theatre. Unfortunately, he is a loser . . . who doesn't live that long. However, Heaven is a glitzy night-club run by a dapper-Don, Chazz Palminteri, who likes Chris. And too, Chris was taken too soon by an over-zealous Collector/Doorman, Eugene Levy, who was stupid enough as to make Sinatra wait for a table! Chazz escorts Chris back down to earth for another body. He can do things like that... as he says, "I'm a freakin' angel." If this sounds familiar, you may be glomming onto Warren Beatty's 1978 Heaven Can Wait, a remake of the 1941 Here Comes Mr. Jordan (I won't go into the other incarnations). You see that the plot device has legs and big feet with track shoes... however, the cleats are blunting a bit. Especially here... as Mr. Rock has rounded-out the sharp edges of his stand-up material to make the soul of his disembodied persona a really nice guy... making it a very nice movie that tiptoes around the issues exemplified in the closing song by Sticky Fingaz and Eminem, "If I Wuz White." Returning to Earth in the body of a pudgy ol' white guy with millions gives Rock and his co-writers plenty of funny stuff, but, without the race card's real zingers... you simply sit back and enjoy a comfortable, warm, romantic fantasy. Don't even think about their toying with the notion of an inter-racial love affair... just try to understand the other international language... and enjoy.

MONKEYBONE is a colorfully surreal, frantic mix of live-action, cell and stop-action model animation that is besotted with inventiveness. At the extreme opposite of DOWN TO EARTH, it bears strange resemblances, MONKEYBONE is a cartoon monkey who gets to inhabit the body of his artist creator when the cartoonist is accidentally sent into a near death coma. Brendan Fraser, taking time off from uncovering MUMMY II, is the mild mannered, brooding artist who's taken over by his wildly priapic, sex-driven creation. (Freudians, have a picnic!) Fun, too, is to see Bridget Fonda (not seen enough) surprised by her boyfriend, Brendan's, transformation.

MONKEYBONE's rattling, aggressive bombardment of kid-like jokes, visual and otherwise, might cause you to miss its smart goodnaturedness. See, Whoopie Goldberg lose her head... a few times. She realizes it may not be a mechaieh, but, they're not easy to come by.

silvia lehrer's cooking column

While vacationing on the East Coast of Florida, we detoured to visit friends in Bonita Springs, just north of Naples. There we had the distinct opportunity of dining at Roy's, named for the internationally acclaimed chef, Roy Yamaguchi.

Roy Yamaguchi has carved out a legendary career boldly blending Pacific Rim ingredients and techniques with Western ones. Born and raised in Japan, Mr. Yamaguchi attributed his earliest appreciation of food to his Hawaiian-born father, a career military man, and Okinawan-born mother. He trained at the Culinary Institute of America, establishing his first culinary traditions and further nurtured his devotion to French cooking when he signed on for an apprenticeship at L'Escoffier, followed by L'Ermitage in Los Angeles, where he was mentored by the late master chef Jean Bertranou. This experience was not taken lightly. He learned to do a dish and work it until it was perfect – until it felt right. "It's not an easy job," he is quoted as saying, "taking much dedication and sacrifice."

At Roy's in Bonita Springs, our group of four was encouraged to share first courses. I preferred to select two starters for my dinner and it was love at first taste, a delectable salad of Maui onions and Kula tomatoes with pancetta and basil balsamic vinaigrette and glazed duck breast with caramelized pineapple in a simple syrup sauce flavored with a bit of chili. Seared lemon grass crusted salmon served with a peppery watercress sauce and Parker Ranch filet mignon with pan-crisp onions and honey mustard sauce were other choices at the table demonstrating delicious presentation and flavors.

Roy Yamaguchi was given the prestigious James Beard award as the Best Pacific Northwest Chef in 1993. He is the author of Roy's Feasts from Hawaii, Ten Speed Press, and star of Public Television's Hawaii Cooks with Roy Yamaguchi.

The original Roy's opened in Honolulu in 1988. Within months the press dubbed the restaurant "the crown jewel of Honolulu's East-West Eateries." Today Yamaguchi's restaurant empire stretches from Hawaii to Tokyo and to numerous locations in the United States. Roy's vision is for each restaurant to have it's own identity and for each chef to have their own personal approach to food.

Wherever Roy's opens I am confident that his brand of East meets West cuisine will continue to excite. Perhaps one day there will be a Roy's on the East End of Long Island?

MAUI ONIONS AND KULA TOMATOES WITH PANCETTA AND BASIL VINAIGRETTE

An inspired salad to highlight Maui's onions and tomatoes. Any sweet onion, such as Vidalia, and local tomatoes in season may be substituted.
Serves 6

1/4 cup extra-virgin olive oil
1 ounce pancetta, diced
1/4 teaspoon finely minced garlic
1/4 teaspoon finely minced shallot
1/4 cup balsamic vinegar
6 large fresh basil leaves, julienned
3 Maui or other mild sweet onions, julienned
6 large ripe beefsteak tomatoes
6 cups washed and torn mixed baby greens
6 sprigs basil for garnish

1. Prepare the vinaigrette: Heat olive oil in a large saute pan and saute the pancetta, garlic, and shallot over medium heat for 1 minute. Remove from heat and stir in the vinegar and half of the basil julienne. Add the onions and return to the heat for about 30 seconds. Remove from heat and stir in the remaining basil.

2. Core the tomatoes; cut a slice off the tops and bottoms and discard. Cut each tomato into 3 thick slices. Putting the salad together involved reassembling the tomatoes, so try to keep the slices in order.

3. To assemble, place a bottom tomato slice on each serving plate. Place a layer of greens on top of the tomato, using up about half of the greens. Place a layer of onions and a little vinaigrette over the greens, and then the center tomato slice. Add another layer of greens (use them all up), onions (save some for garnish), and top with the last slice of tomato. Garnish with a little more onion salad and a basil sprig. Pour a little of the remaining vinaigrette around the salad and serve.

SEARED LEMON GRASS – CRUSTED SALMON WITH WATERCRESS – GINGER SAUCE

Here, Roy pairs a French-style sauce with the Asian flavors of the salmon crust.
Serves 4

For the Lemon Grass Crust
2 tablespoons finely minced lemon grass
1 tablespoon minced garlic
1 tablespoon minced shallot
1 tablespoon minced ginger
1 tablespoon shichimi*
4 salmon steaks, about 7 ounces each

Watercress Sauce
3 tablespoons chopped ginger
1 bunch watercress, leaves only
1 cup Beurre Blanc*
1/4 cup canola oil

Garnish
4 sprigs watercress
4 teaspoons red pickled ginger

1. Combine the crust ingredients in a mixing bowl. About 5 minutes before you are ready to cook the salmon, thoroughly coat one side of each steak with the crust.

2. For the sauce, squeeze the ginger in a garlic press and place the extracted juice in a mixing bowl (there should be about 1 tablespoon) Discard the ginger pulp. Bring a saucepan of water to a boil, remove from heat, and blanch the watercress for 15 seconds. Drain thoroughly. Mince the watercress leaves and mix them with the ginger juice. Stir the watercress into the Beurre Blanc, and keep warm.

3. Heat a large cast-iron skillet over medium high heat. Coat the crusted side of the salmon with the canola oil and sear crusted side first, for about 1 1/2 minutes. Turn over and sear the other side for about 1 minute longer.

4. To serve, place a salmon steak, crusted side up, in the center of each serving plate and ladle the watercress ginger sauce around the salmon. Garnish with the watercress sprigs and pickled ginger.

*Shichimi translates from Japanese to "seven spices" or "seven flavors." If the bottle says shichimi togarashi, it's probably very spicy. *Beurre Blanc is a classic white butter sauce made with white wine, cream and butter.

FILET MIGNON WITH PAN-CRISPED ONIONS AND HONEY MUSTARD SAUCE

When buying filet mignon (the small end of the tenderloin), look for a thickness of 1 1/2 to 2 inches.
Serves 4

Honey Mustard Sauce
1/4 cup peanut oil
2 Maui (or sweet) onions, chopped (about 1 cup)
8 cloves garlic, minced
3/4 cup chopped carrots
3/4 cup chopped celery
4 bay leaves
5 black peppercorns
1 cup port or cabernet sauvignon
1 quart veal stock
1 cup whole grain mustard
1/3 cup honey
10 tablespoons chilled, unsalted butter, chopped

Onions
1 cup peanut oil
1 1/2 cups flour
4 large Maui (or other sweet) onions, finely julienned

Vegetable Garnish (optional)
Zucchini, yellow squash and carrot, cut into ovals (or rounds) and steamed for a minute or two

1. For the sauce, heat the peanut oil in a heavy saucepan and saute the onions, garlic, carrots, celery, bay leaves, and peppercorns over medium high heat for 3 to 5 minutes, stirring occasionally until golden brown. Deglaze the pan with the port or cabernet, and add the stock, mustard, and honey. Reduce the liquid to about 2 1/2 cups, stirring occasionally until the sauce is thick enough to coat the back of a spoon. Strain through a fine sieve into a clean pan (discard the solids) and return to the heat. Whisk in the butter, a little at a time, and incorporate thoroughly. Keep warm in a double boiler.

2. To prepare the onions, heat the peanut oil in a heavy saucepan (there should be enough to come at least 1 1/2 inches up the sides of the pan). Place the flour on a plate and lightly dredge the onions in the flour. When the oil is hot, fry the onions for about 5 to 7 minutes over medium heat, turning constantly but gently, until golden brown. Drain on paper towels, and keep warm.

3. Preheat the grill. Season the filets with salt and pepper. Grill for about 3 to 4 minutes per side for medium-rare. Place a filet in the center of each serving plate and spoon the sauce around the meat. Place a handful of the onions on top of the filet. If desired, arrange the vegetables around the filet with a sunburst effect.

A SHORT HISTORY OF CUTLERY Knives were the first to be invented. Cavemen used crude stone knives to cut meat. Spoons were next. The earliest forms found (carved from bone, stone, or wood) suggest they were invented 25,000 years ago. Forks are the newest. Invented in the 11th century, they were demonized by the Catholic Church, the elders stating that it would be heresy for anything other than hands to touch the food that God created. They finally gained acceptance in the 13th and 14th centuries when French noblemen began using them, ostensibly to keep their clothes clean as they dined. (Source: The History Channel)

HEALTH & BEAUTY

About Face: Off With The Old, On With The New

I don't know about you, but I despise washing my washcloths and not being able to remove any mascara that has been left behind. I thought I had that dilemma solved when I bought only white and figured I could bleach them and it would come clean. Oh, they did for awhile, till the next use! And these holes began to set in from the constant bleaching. Then Martha tells us that she only uses dark colors for washcloths, especially for her guests, and I am supposing that she does this not to have them embarrassed if they should soil them. Smart. But think of all the mascara that is on still on them. Just because you can't see it, it doesn't mean it's not there Martha! Yes, she did have a wonderful idea, but I have one better. Much better.

Oil of Olay puts out these ever so soft disposable washcloths in a neat little white tub. Not only are they convenient, they are loaded with the nicest-smelling cleanser that is activated upon contact with warm water. You simply have got to try them! They are sort of waffled, and just the right size for the job. You also use them to rinse your face and suggest that you do that. No need for a separate washcloth to rinse either. They leave your face prepared for your moisturizer, cleaned and smoothed. You will love them. I would say they are safe for all skin types. Love 'em, love 'em, love 'em.

Another product that seems to be getting rave reviews is the new Bronze Lights and Color Lights Collections from Revlon. The line boasts beautiful luminous colors that either pale out your face or warm it up. The Colorlights are the lighter of the new pallets. They have a pretty cover that is worn over your foundation, yes that's right, over your foundation. Also in the line is a dewy finish blush for your cheeks.

The eyes have their shadows in little tubes that glide on effortlessly. The Wet/Dry pencil rounds out the eyes. For lips, they have a little case with a few colors for you to mix and match and apply over your lipstick, also available from the line.

And nail enamel finishes it all up. Both the Colorlights and the Bronzelights carry the same products in different colors. Sounds confusing, so it is worth a go-see. If you get there soon, there are little booklets there on the display, check the back for a two-dollar-off coupon that can be used right away. It is being sold wherever Revlon is carried.

Stay tuned...

EAST END FARMING WITH JOE GERGELA

After a several month sabbatical from my column, it's time to get in the "spring" of things. Only three weeks to the vernal equinox. I think everyone has had enough of winter, though this winter was the most exciting of my life. There is much to tell about but I'll start with a story about my experience visiting the Ukraine.

Last year I was solicited by a Washington, DC based organization called CNFA, Citizens Network for Foreign Affairs, to consider volunteering for a farmer to farmer exchange program. At first there were several assignments possible that met my background and interest in Africa and Moldova. After some thought and consideration, I passed on them. Around November, CNA contacted me regarding an assignment in Ukraine to help the Private Farmers Association (Ukrainian Farm Bureau) develop a strategic plan to increase their membership, and develop a mission statement thereby enhancing their organization as a political lobbying force. The CNA farmer to farmer exchange program is funded by the United States Agency for Industrial Development. After reading the charge of the assignment, plus the fact that my grandfather Joseph Gergela Sr. was Ukrainian/Polish I gave the idea careful consideration along with the help of my family and Farm Bureau leaders. When my father was buried next to his uncle, we learned that the original spelling of my name was Gergiela and in fact Gergela was the Americanized version. After learning more about the proposed assignment, I made a decision that I would in fact go to the Ukraine mid-January after the American Farm Bureau Federation Convention and the L.I. Agricultural Forum were over. The CNA office in Kiev, the capital of Ukraine, prepared a scope of work itinerary with the host organization, the Ukrainian Private Farmers Association outlining the entire 3 1/2 week assignment. I left Kennedy Airport January 18th on my way for a life experience I'll never, ever forget.

I arrived in Paris at 8:30 Friday morning in pea soup fog. My connection to Kiev was two hours late. I was surprised that we were even going considering the dense fog situation. Finally I arrived in Kiev at 3:00 p.m. their time, a seven-hour time change from New York. My close friend, State Senator Ken LaValle, had called me several times before I left. First to ask me, "Are you crazy going to Kiev in January?" and the second time to give me some advice as he was in Kiev last summer working with Ukrainian legislators. He did tell me not to over react when I got to the airport in Kiev because of the military police presence at their customs. It was a little scary but uneventful as they ushered me through quickly. The United States passport was like a magic pass. Once I got through customs, I was

POLICE BLOTTER

They came in through the bathroom window, but they must have left through the front door, carrying an Aiwa stereo valued at $350, a VCR valued at $150 and a Sony TV valued at $350. Southampton Town Police don't have any suspects, but the bathroom window of a Millstone Brook Lane home was found broken and a neighbor reported that a dark sedan was parked in the driveway at 8:30 a.m. on a morning prior to the discovery of the missing objects.

Absent-minded tile man? A 71-year old Southampton resident was charged with petit larceny after fleeing Riverhead Building Supply on Powell Ave. with a grout tool which he must have forgotten to pay for. He was released by police after agreeing to appear in court.

The Dom Perignon and Chateau Petrus safe but $600 was missing as a teetotaling thief makes off with $$$. Southampton Town Police responded to an alarm at Zabi's Wine and Spirits on County Rd. 39 at 10:20 p.m. on February 18. The owner also responded and told police that $600 was missing but no wine or liquor appeared to have been stolen.

A 25-year old male, evidently unable to find the men's room at Bub's Tavern on Montauk Highway in Hampton Bays, was detained and issued a ticket by Town Police after urinating on the sidewalk in front of the tavern at 4 a.m. on Saturday, Feb. 24.

Hector Davilla, a 35-year old from Brooklyn, suspected of committing a string of crimes in the East Hampton area, was finally captured fleeing from T & B Auto Repair on Feb. 24 at 4:30 a.m. after police found fresh tracks in the snow . They began following the tracks at Blue Bay Realty, crossed over Rte. 27 to V&V Auto Service, then they went east into the woods, across Bunker Hill Road and finally into the T&B Auto Repair lot off Montauk Hwy. where they spotted Mr. Davilla heading east. Mr. Davilla is also suspected of stealing a delivery truck, snacks and a little spending money from Brent's General Store and then heading over to Whitmore's to trade in the truck for slicker wheels: a 1995 GMC van, which was eventually recovered in Brooklyn.

Dear Dan,

I spend my winters in Arizona, but never miss an issue because your paper is online. I was delighted to learn that my good friend Charles Wildbank won last year's cover contest. When I emailed him, he was surprised and very happy to learn this good news.

Thank you for being online... my connection with my hometown of Southampton is never broken as long as Dan's Papers is there for me and countless others.

FACT OR FICTION?
Dear Dan,

You've done it again – more American history fairy tales.

Germans landing "just west of Montauk" – how about Amagansett? The spies were "hung" – I thought pictures were hung and people were hanged.

"30,000 strong" mustered for Cuba? I have three strong sources that put Shaffer's Five Corps at 17,000.

First American army on foreign soil – check campaigns and battles in Revolutionary War and War of 1812 and you will find Canada. Almost every major battle in the Mexican war was fought in Mexico.

Camp Wikoff – named in honor of Colonel Charles W. Koff, Commanding Officer of the 13th Infantry killed advancing through the 71st New York (volunteers) against the Spanish.

Remember the adage – "You could look it up"!

met by CNA representatives and my companion for the next 3 1/2 weeks, my interpreter: Lena Kotyk. As we drove to Kiev about 20 miles away, I was surprised by how little traffic there was on a six-lane major highway. The driver explained that the highway was designed to impress foreign visitors to give the perception that the Ukraine was a modern, developed country. A half hour later, we were in Kiev, a sprawling city of 3 million people, looking like any other large city I've visited except for the 50-foot statue of Lenin that we passed as we entered the city. A few minutes later we were at the CNA headquarters in downtown. I spent the next hour or so getting briefed about my assignment and the greatest adventure of my life was underway. By this time, I was exhausted as I hadn't slept since I left home a day and a half earlier. Next stop was my hotel, a ten story building, that one would never know by looking at it, was a hotel. It was actually quite nice and close to American comfort standards.

Lena helped me check in and ordered dinner. I had absolutely no clue on Russian/Ukrainian language. My first meal was pork filet, potatoes and cole slaw which became a staple diet during my trip. Some of the restaurants I visited later had menus in both Russian, French and English. After dinner, I hit the sack and immediately passed into a much-needed sleep. I had made it to Kiev. (Next week's column I'll continue on with my adventure)

Dan's Papers
The Ultimate East End Companion

I am writing this for all of us who have someone in our lives whom we love and would never want to see any harm come to. Love is a wonderful feeling, one of its benefits is it takes us away from otherwise insurmountable situations to plateaus of, "we can overcome this together".

Then there comes that dark cursed time we all dread, illness, which, with all the love in the world, is the most difficult test of that love. Do we lose faith, or do we draw from that love the strength we need to overcome even the worst situations? Our family has come to that point where we need to concentrate all our love and help one of our family members get through a dark time. Michael is my son-in-law and has been living with HVC for about ten years, that we know of. His condition was always taken very lightly because he always looked so good and was in otherwise top notch health. We all felt that with his monitoring of his diet he would live to be a hundred. Michael is the kind of guy everyone loves. He is never too busy to help anyone and always has a smile on his face. Such expressions as "mench", "he hasn't got a bad bone in his body" and many other similar phrases have been used to describe Michael. I am sure some of you had the pleasure of having Michael do a drapery or shade installation in your homes, in which case you know exactly what I mean. This past winter reality set in big time. One morning Michael went to work to do his drapery installations out in the Hamptons and on the way out he started coughing up blood. He returned home where the situation worsened, he was bleeding profusely. Michael was rushed to Stony Brook hospital where the doctors were at a loss. It was a nightmare, the weekend, with no specialists on staff and a relatively new disease which few specialists can even understand fully. It was determined that Michael's portal vein had burst due to the fact that the liver could no longer handle the amount of blood that it had to process. Michael's liver was obviously a lot more damaged than had been suspected. A new procedure for the liver, called a stint, seemed the only way to neutralize this situation. The problem now was that none of the staff at Stony brook had ever done this procedure and it is quite complicated. A stint, in as simple terms as I understand it, is a metal tube attached to the vein and inserted through the liver to relieve the pressure, hopefully stopping the portal vein from bleeding. Fortunately Michael's wife knew of such a surgeon and she called him, thank God he was home, and he rushed to the hospital to set up the procedure. Michael was saved and has been put on a liver transplant list. Anyone familiar with transplant lists must know that it is extremely difficult. There is an excellent chance that a partial liver transplant will increase Michael's chances. The liver is an organ that can regenerate itself. A doner can regenerate the piece that is donated and the recipient can grow more healthy liver tissue from the piece donated. The match is the key. Body weight has to be similar, blood type, and general health. I implore anyone who would be willing to share his or her love for life for Michael to please call Nora at 631-286-4690.
